Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The self-appointed dictatorship of Lieut. Gen. Horvath, anti-Bolshevist military leader in Eastern Siberia, under which he sought to assume control of all the Russian military forces in the Far East, was short-lived.

Diplomatic advices from Vladivostok were received in Washington today stating that his coup d'état had failed through the intervention of the allied representatives at Vladivostok, who informed his representative, General Pleshkoff, that the authority of the new Siberian Government would be upheld.

According to these advices the coup of General Horvath was of scarcely an hour's duration. The diplomats made very clear that no Government based on personal assumption of power would be acceptable to the Entente powers, but that they were prepared to support Governments in Russia that were based on a free expression of popular sentiment.

There was nothing left for General Horvath but to relinquish his pretensions to hold the reins of governmental power. Whether he will now work hand in hand with the Allies in their efforts to be of real help to the Russian people remains to be seen. The advices received today did not indicate what would be the future attitude of General Horvath.

General Advance in Siberia.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—On the Ussuri front, north of Vladivostok, the Bolsheviki have retired six miles before a general advance by all the allied forces, according to reports received in Shanghai and transmitted by Reuter's. American and Japanese troops are entraining for the front.

News from the front, it is added, is meagre, owing to the fact that the Japanese have taken over from the Czechs the preparation of information. The Japanese are said to be extremely reticent.

Operation of the railroads has been assumed by the Allies, according to advices by way of Peking, which add that they probably will be operated by the American engineers under John F. Stevens.

Horvath's Status Puzzling.

The status of Horvath has been one of the puzzling elements in the Siberian situation. He was Vice President and General Manager of the Chinese Eastern Railway when the revolution overturned the Government of the late Czar. He is anti-German and anti-Bolshevist, but a monarchist. When the Kerensky Government came into power he was allowed to retain his management of the Chinese Eastern Railway, which runs through Manchuria from the Transsiberian main line.

He retained control over the management of the railway when Lenine and Trotzky seized the Government, and their efforts to oust him were unsuccessful. Later when the Bolsheviki seized Vladivostok Horvath established his headquarters in Manchuria just south of the Russian border, and organized a local Government.

The Czechoslovaks, in turn, gained control at Vladivostok, and then Horvath, becoming ambitious, decided to go there. But by that time marines had been landed by the allied powers, and Horvath found himself confronted with the Provisional Eastern Siberian Government. There were negotiations between this authority and Horvath's local government in an effort to reach an agreement. They failed, however, because of Horvath's personal ambitions.

It was argued that he could not hope to unite all the elements among the Russians in Siberia around himself. He was objectionable to the Bolsheviki, and the moderates were inclined to regard him as a reactionary intent upon bringing about a restoration of the monarchy.

Horvath, however, appointed a temporary Cabinet for Siberia, and from his headquarters in Eastern Manchuria set up a program of Government which included the renewal of all the treaties with the allied powers. He declared it to be his intention to "act in complete accord with our brave allies and to re-

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28.—The giant battle in the west daily is growing wider and more terrible, says the Cologne Gazette, and, through the British attack north of the Somme has assumed an unprecedented extent. The paper declares that even the enormously long fronts in the Russo-Japanese war and the greater offensives of the present war recede when compared with the present allied offensive.

The newspaper utters a warning that in the calm sectors of the long western front strong enemy forces continually are ready for an immediate attack whenever prospects become favorable. Therefore German divisions must always be held in readiness for a battle on these sectors also.

SLAVS IN AUSTRIA MOVE TO MOBILIZE

Money Reported to Have Been Issued Already by the Proposed New State.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28.—"Serious events are imminent in Bohemia and the moment of going over from words to deeds cannot now be far distant." So declares the generally well-informed Vienna correspondent of the Weser Zeitung in a long message from the Austrian capital.

Quickly the problem of the various nationalities in Austria, he declares, may reach a climax, for it is clear that "the Slavs in the Danube monarchy have already taken the first step toward mobilization." He goes on to say:

"It must be agreed that the English Government would not have recognized the Czechoslovak State without having first placed themselves in communication with those most closely concerned, namely, the Czechs. It is noteworthy that practically at the same time the Czechoslovak National Council, at the head of which Dr. Kramersch stands, issued a call to the people indicating a moment at which deeds would be the order of day and not words.

"Not less noteworthy is the appeal of the Union of Czech Districts, which declared that the severest possible economic boycott of the enemv, that is, the Germans, was the duty of the population. Further, it reported that already in Bohemia new Czechoslovak money was passing from hand to hand."

The correspondent then points to some measures taken by the authorities. The carrying of arms, he says, has been forbidden and on Sunday the railway line from Prague to Pilsen was placed under military patrols.

"But not only in Bohemia," he declares, "are things driving toward a crisis. In the southern Slav districts of the monarchy conditions are similar."

He refers to the Slav congress at Laibach, because that gathering outwardly appeared to be concerned with the foundation of a Slav National Council, just as the recent similar meeting in Prague was apparently for the purpose of setting up a Czech national theatre, but in reality had for its aim the bringing into existence of a general Czech commonality, which was supported by Czech, Polish, and Serbo-Croatian representatives.

"The official reports of the Laibach conference," says the correspondent, "simply said that it had to do with the foundation of the National Council, but as Deputy Koroschit emphatically declared that only formed part of the whole southern Slav organization, with headquarters at Agram, we must therefore reckon with an organization embracing all the Jugoslav lands similar in kind to the Czech National Council led by Kramersch.

"The prospects for this organization are very favorable, for it is clear that the Greater Croatian movement is daily being reduced in strength by that of the pro-Entente Jugoslavs. In the south, therefore, we shall soon have similar conditions to those prevailing in the Czech regions.

"The Laibach gathering was promoted according to a common plan and something like a general mobilization of Slavdom is contemplated. It is impossible to avoid the belief that the opening of hostilities will not be long delayed. Of precaution by those against whom all this is directed one hears nothing."

DE HAVILANDS NOW MADE IN QUANTITY, RYAN DECLARES

MANY NEW TYPES TESTED

ENGINES THE BIG PROBLEM

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Disclosures regarding some of the more recent aspects of the aviation program were authorized this afternoon by John D. Ryan, on the eve of the relinquishment of his post as Director of the Bureau of Aircraft Production to become Second Assistant Secretary of War and Director of the Air Service.

Mr. Ryan revealed that the orders for 12-cylindered Liberty motors had been more than doubled and that new types of airplanes were being experimentally developed in an effort to find a plane that would prove a success when equipped with the Liberty motor.

In the effort to develop these new types of machines that would be satisfactory to the army, Mr. Ryan said the services of Orville Wright were being utilized. Mr. Wright is a member of the Dayton-Wright Company which is making a large number of planes for the Government. Mr. Ryan said that the services of Messrs. Curtiss, Vought, Martin, Willard, Loening, and others were likewise being used.

At least four machines that are new in American aircraft manufacture have been tested at Dayton in the last two weeks, Mr. Ryan said, one of them being the S. E. 5; a British machine, and another, a copy of the English Bristol, is being experimentally flown with an engine of the same power as is used in this machine in the British Army. Two foreign officers have designed machines which are being tested. One was designed by Captain Lepere, a French officer, and has been flying, experimentally, for thirty days.

Mr. Ryan said that during the past week the Pomilio Brothers had come to this country to design planes to fit our engines and have established themselves at Indianapolis. At least two other types were being flown experimentally, Mr. Ryan said, but he did not consider it wise to go into details regarding them at this time. Mr. Ryan refrained from discussing the Senate report on its aircraft investigation. He preferred to deal with the present and future instead of with past mistakes.

"I am not going to discuss reports of investigations," said Mr. Ryan. "We think that satisfactory progress has been made in many respects. We were unfortunate in having to abandon the production of one of the smaller types of airplanes, the so-called Bristol fighter, which was proved after thorough tests that it was not a safe machine, that it was not a useful machine for military purposes, and we are not going to make it or any but safe machines and machines of military value. We may repeat that kind of a mistake; we may find that we are even ready to go into production with a machine and we may have spent a lot of time and a lot of effort in developing it, but when we get to the point, whenever and wherever it is, where we find a machine is not of

Germany Short of Reserves, Using Shattered Divisions

WITH THE BRITISH ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 28, (Reuter.)—How hard the enemy is off for reserves may be gathered from the fact that the 148th Regiment of the 41st Division reappeared in the battleline during the defense of Cappy on the south bank of the Somme, although this division lost 2,250 men made prisoners at Warfusee between Aug. 8 and Aug. 10, and was withdrawn as no longer fit to fight.

Prisoners taken this week say that during one of the British bombing raids the headquarters of Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria was struck, and that among the casualties were a General of the pioneers and a staff Captain. Rupprecht was absent at the time. The prisoners expressed the view that he should be with his army at a time like this, instead of being far away courting his Princess fiancée.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The change which has come over the enemy's fortunes in the past few weeks is quite as dramatic and almost as sudden as that which led to his retreat from the Marne to the Aisne in September 1914. I have had the good fortune to be able to see much of the Somme battlefield, and I left it very deeply impressed with the peril of our situation in April last, when the first great attempt by the Germans to separate the British and French Armies had been checked.

On April 24 the enemy captured Villers-Bretonneux, and passed on beyond the village toward Amiens. Had he been able to follow up at once the advance he had then gained, or even to hold the ground he had won long enough to allow of reinforcements being brought up, Amiens must have fallen. Fortunately that very night Sir Henry Rawlinson, who realized that the enemy must not be given time to dig himself in, counterattacked with a small force mainly of Australians, and the Germans were driven back to the east of Villers-Bretonneux. Still more fortunately, the enemy embarked on his Flanders offensive. This appeared to be going so well that he diverted to it forces which, if used on the Amiens front, would almost certainly have given him the result he set out to obtain on March 21—the separation of the allied forces.

As in 1914, so in 1918, the Germans failed to obtain what appeared to be within their grasp, because they did not follow up their first success and because they changed their plan at the wrong moment. The Hindenburg-Ludendorff combination, brilliantly successful in the easier conditions of the eastern front, has on the western front made exactly the mistakes which von Moltke made in 1914.

Their force has been frittered away on side issues, and we are now witnessing the consequences. It took too long to shape the Crown Prince's armies for the great offensive of last month on either side of Rheims.

German 'Flying Tank' Captured by British, But Its Armor Affords Poor Protection

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—An interesting feature of the German A. E. G. biplane, described in a report prepared by the technical department of the Aircraft Construction Ministry of Munitions, is the provision of armoring to protect the crew. There are three panels of armor at each side and three at the bottom of the fuselage, with an armor bulkhead at the rear of the gunner's cockpit to protect him from behind.

The armor is 5.1 mm., nearly one-fifth of an inch in thickness, and has a total area of nearly 106 square feet with a weight of approximately 860 pounds. Tests of its resistance to penetration have been made with bullets of various types, and the conclusion reached is that it is undoubtedly too light to afford protection against British armor-piercing bullets fired from the ground at a lower height than 500 feet.

While a machine armored with it would have to fly at not less than 1,000 feet to be safe from all but a very low percentage of hits, the armor in the machine examined did not appear to have been so well employed as it might have been in structural capacity, being simply attached to the framework to which it added no material strength. Its appearance indeed suggested that it had been added by way of experiment and that it was more or less of a makeshift character.

The airplane itself, which has the date of Feb. 3, 1918, stamped on its main frames, was brought down by a British machine near Hinges on May 16 and is the first of its type to be obtained. It is designed for carrying out offensive patrols against infantry.

WITH THE BRITISH ARMIES IN FRANCE, Aug. 28.—When I went up into the battle area this morning southeast of Arras the enemy was shelling Monchy and the high ground beyond, and his long-range Krupps burst and left black trails of smoke in the wet air like those from a factory chimney.

Beyond, along Wancourt Ridge, it seemed very quiet, and when I traveled southward past the line of Mercatel and Neuville Vitasse, which are now in our hands again after a brief possession by the enemy, not a single shell came over Croisilles Ridge, which overlooks the village of Croisilles, entered by the English troops yesterday, or over Bullecourt, upon which they advanced today.

I was with the officers of these troops when the attack was renewed at 12:30 o'clock today. We were standing amid the wreckage of old trenches and huts left behind in the wake of all this fighting when a hurricane bombardment opened from all the British guns.

The batteries were scattered about over a wide area, which includes the newly captured villages of Boiry, Becquerrelle, and Boyelles, and many heaps of ruins which were once hamlets and farmsteads and cottages, all smashed to bits. Groups of huts were broken to matchwood, and twisted iron and railway lines were flung wildly over the fields in the indescribable litter of this fighting zone.

British Attacked in a Mist.

It had been raining hard and the sky was heavy with storm clouds, beneath which, along the crests of the high ground, the sun shone with a white gleaming light. It sparkled on the rainwashed ruins with their white chalk base and upon the waterproof capes of the men marching along the tracks behind the lines and upon field batteries moving forward with their transport.

Suddenly, at the hour of 12:30, the queer quietude, which had only been broken by the shocks of single long-range guns firing, burst into a tumult of noise as all the British batteries over the ridge to Bullecourt began a terrific drumfire. For several miles the wreckage of the battlefield was alive with little points of light flashing through the wet mist, running along the ridge like sparks and setting the rank grass alight.

It was an intense bombardment preceding a new attack by English troops, with Scots on their right beyond Croisilles and Fontaine Les Croisilles toward the Bullecourt and Drocourt-Queant line. Officers directing their operations told me that Croisilles had been well in their hands since yesterday, and that with the help of the Scots to the north of them they hoped to get a good deal further today. Now Croisilles is no longer a furnace of machine gun fire.

Germans Ran from Bullecourt.

One of the officers at that moment was called to a telephone. He was in touch with his forward observers, and after listening to a message he turned and said:

"It seems to have started all

Germans Admit Illusions About Allies' Power; Vorwaerts Bitter Over Depreciating America

By GEORGE RENWICK.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28.—Here are two interesting German confessions. Baron von Ardenne, military critic of the Berliner Tageblatt, writing in that paper, says:

"It is only natural that in Germany the question should be asked how it was at all possible for General Foch to pass suddenly from the defensive to a tempestuous and, as far as territorial gains are concerned, to a successful offensive. The solution of the riddle lies in the fact that the Entente States' will to annihilation enabled them, after unparalleled exertions, to gather together a powerful numerical superiority in all arms.

"After three great annihilating blows administered to the Entente by the German offensive, the belief was accepted on the German side that Foch's reserve or manoeuvre army, estimated at sixty divisions, was prematurely used up, to a great extent, in local defensive counter-attacks. As a united operating force, it was declared that it need not be taken into account any longer. This view was supported by semi-official reports. The belief, however, rests on error, and it is well to acknowledge that."

Vorwärts has a somewhat more complete notion regarding the extent to which confession is good for the soul. Mournfully it gives vent to its feelings thus:

"In reports from the western front we have often read of the superiority of the enemy, but who among us day in and day out told us that France had been bled white, that Italy was exhausted, that the U-boat war had brought England near to her end? Who greeted the entry of America into the war with relief? Who told us that this same America would never be able to bring a single man or single ship to Europe?

"Belgium is a little country which alone would have been powerless against Germany, but which has not agreed yet to conclude peace because in her need friends streamed to her side from all parts of the world. France was militarily inferior to us, but has stood against us for four years and has been able to protect her capital from hostile threats because she was supported by powerful allies. England is in herself a great power, but when danger threatened her she found enthusiastic support from the whole English world, and finally America sprang to her side."

"Why," Vorwärts sadly asks, "has Germany no such friends? The natural inclination to support the weak side, for she is the weakest side in this great war, has not made itself felt. Why?" The answer fills a column, but it may be boiled down to a few words. She has always been bragging and still brags about her strength. She judged and judges everything and everybody in terms of force. So it is concluded in this jeremiad that Germany is in danger, and that she has, by reason of her false policy, no friends.

PROGRESS ON THE SCARPE

LONDON, Aug. 28. — British troops, continuing their attacks on the Arras-Bapaume front and on both sides of the Somme, made substantial progress today.

Croisilles, the strong German position north of Bapaume, which has stubbornly held out against British attacks, was captured by a flanking movement, and Haig's men gained ground at all points of the battleline between Bapaume and the River Scarpe.

North of the Arras-Cambrai Road the Canadians captured the villages of Boiry and Pelves.

On the north bank of the Somme the British took Curlu and Hardécourt, and pushed eastward toward Maurepas.

South of that river Australian troops, in an advance of between four and five miles, reached the Fresnes-Herbécourt line, and at last accounts were meeting stiff German resistance in their attempts to reach the crossings of the Somme at Péronne and Brie.

In the Lys sector the British line has been advanced on a four-mile front astride the Neuf Berquin-Estaires Road.

FIERCE FIGHT IN BAZOCHES

BERLIN, Aug. 29, (via London.)—In the operations in the Vesle sector the Germans assert they have inflicted severe losses on the Americans and taken more than 250 prisoners. This assertion is set forth in the statement from General Headquarters today.

AMERICAN FORCES ON THE VESLE, Aug. 28. (Associated Press.)—Fighting between American troops and German forces continued all night in the region of Bazoches, to the east of Fismes. Early this morning the Americans got a foothold on the eastern outskirts of the town.

Some German snipers and machine gunners were stubbornly clinging to the northern edge of Bazoches, using cellars and the walls of houses for protection.

American and French big guns were pounding away at the enemy, and the Germans had been unable to bring up reinforcements.

While the American troops gained ground in the vicinity of Bazoches, German forces, after fighting which lasted all night, gained a hold upon Fismette. There were numerous hand-to-hand encounters in the town.

German machine gunners who had dug into the hills in line with the streets of Fismette endeavored to shoot down the Americans when they were driven from the houses by German artillery and the bombs of enemy aviators.

Enemy patrols are now fighting for possession of Fismette.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Aug. 28.—The French armies are driving the enemy before them on the whole front from Chaulnes to the Oise. Since the first battle of the Marne the advance has never been so rapid.

By 10 o'clock this morning General Humbert's troops had gained eight miles at the extreme depth, despite the most difficult country, wooded, mountainous, and broken by ravines, in the massif west of Noyon. The strong fortress of Mont Renaud, commanding the Oise Valley, which resisted the hurricane of German assaults in March, was stormed this morning by a triumphant rush. The French pushed on to the gates of Noyon, whose last bastion, Porqueri-Court Hill, was outflanked and is bound to fall.

In places the enemy infantry at first attempted to bar the French progress, though from the outset the artillery reaction was very feeble. But the elan of the French was resistless, and the "islands" of resistance were submerged in the general demoralization.

While immediate results were won by the triumphant drive of the British to the northward, who this morning are reported to have pierced the Hindenburg line in the region of Croisilles, the victory is no less due to the extraordinary vitality of the French armies. The announcement that Debeney's troops took Chaulnes is an admission of the extension of the French front to the left, which releases a large force of British for vital operations in the north.

Perhaps now Germany will admit that Foch's strategic reserve is not such a fiction as she was once pleased to imagine. Gigantic as has been France's efforts throughout the war, she was never called upon to bear such a burden as in the last five months. Everywhere the French troops bore the brunt of the German drives, which broke against their iron resistance.

It was Mangin and de Goutte who first turned the tide, then Humbert, Debeney, and Mangin. Despite all that, when a new call was made upon France's energy there was no hesitation. Debeney's line was extended, and the latest victory is proof that Foch's confidence in his men was justified. It is a most astounding tribute to the grit and martial quality of the army and its commander.

Gains on 18-Mile Front.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—French troops have captured Chaulnes and, driving the Germans in precipitate flight, have carried their lines eastward to the Somme River and the Canal du Nord on the eighteen-mile front between Cizancourt and Noyon.

Their advance since yesterday at some points has been more than six miles.

From Cizancourt [seven miles south of Péronne] they hold the heights on the west bank of the Somme to a point east of Nesle, which was entered by their cavalry this morning.

Further south they are established on the west bank of the Canal du Nord, for the greater part of its course, from a point near Nesle to Noyon.

Several towns west and northwest of Noyon have been captured, including Vauchelles, less than half a mile west of the city, which is reported to be at their mercy.

Foe's Retreat More Precipitate.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Aug. 28, (Associated Press.)—The German retreat north of the Avre River has been far more speedy since the fall of Chaulnes than previously. Vigorously pursued by French troops and harassed by their own mustard gas shells, which they left behind and which are being fired from German guns by French gunners, the enemy is making haste to cross the river in the region of Nesle and the Canal du Nord.

General Debeney's men, without great opposition, advanced four and a half miles during the night, and this morning their cavalry was upon Nesle, close on the heels of the retiring enemy. The pursuit toward the Canal du Nord slackened this morning when the enemy's artillery of all calibres maintained a heavy fire from strong positions west of the canal.

After Chaulnes fell, Gomiécourt, to the north, and Sept Fours were taken by the French, while later Cressy, Balatre, Champien, and Roiglise, between Nesle and Roye, were captured, and more than a score of other villages occupied.

Recaptured Towns in Utter Ruin.

The battlefield the Germans have abandoned presents a picture of devastation and desolation that has not been surpassed during the war. Roye and the villages round about have been quite as thoroughly demolished as Montdidier and Moreuil. Even cemeteries have been blown up, tombstones smashed, and graves opened. The names of towns in this region no longer have any other significance than as a reminiscence and a geographical designation. They have ceased to exist as towns. Their sites are hardly recognizable, for the intense shelling has not only obliterated streets and defaced boundary lines, but has rendered the topography unrecognizable in many places.

The ruins abandoned by the Germans previously were carefully filled with mustard gas. For this reason Roye is still inaccessible for occupation.

The Germans were not able to use all the gas projectiles they brought to the present front, and large dumps of them fell into French hands. They are now being fired against the enemy from some of the hundreds of German guns the French 1st Army has taken since Aug. 8.

The French 3d Army also attacked this morning, occupying Dives and pushing eastward to Vauchelles, less than half a mile from Noyon, the fall of which appears to be only a question of hours if the French so elect.

With the French in possession of Noyon, the Germans will have only their positions to the northeast, in the hills along the Oise, and in the northwest on the west bank of the Canal du Nord, to protect their retreat to the forest of St. Gobain and the Hindenburg line.

It is not considered possible that the German retreat will halt on the Oise, so close are the French pressing the enemy. French patrols reached the region of Bethencourt this afternoon. [One of the principal bridges across the Somme is at Bethencourt.]

The crossing of the canal and the River Somme in that region by the French troops would create the gravest menace to the safety of the enemy's troops and material still south of the river. This prospect explains the sacrifice of an immense quantity of material in the region between Roye and the canal in order to accelerate the retrograde movement, which in some places has been so rapid that contact between the French advanced guards and the enemy's machine gun sections protecting the German rear has almost been broken.

Stages of the French Advance.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES IN THE FIELD, Aug. 28, (Associated Press.)—French cavalry this morning entered Nesle. French infantry occupied the town of Cressy, two and a half miles southeast of Nesle.

The French Third Army today captured Dives and, pushing on to the eastward, reached the outskirts of Noyon.

PARIS, Aug. 28, (Associated Press.)—The German retreat on the Somme battlefield has become precipitate. The French First and Third armies are at no point losing contact with the enemy. The French are inflicting heavy losses on the retreating Germans.

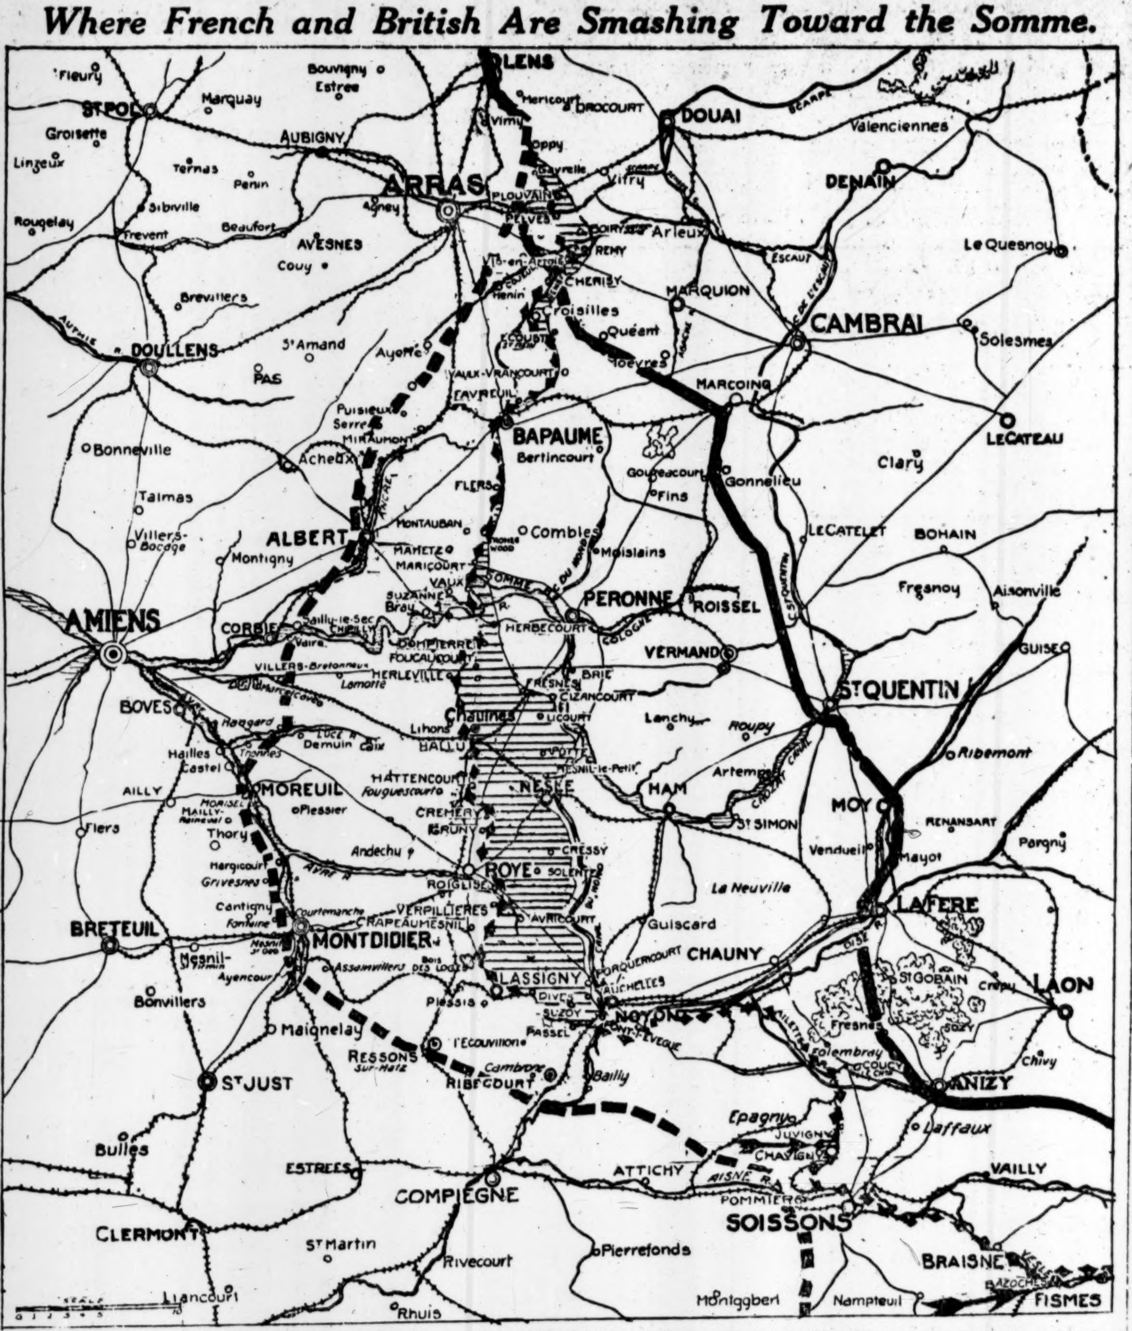
General Mangin's troops began crossing the Aillette River today, it was announced here this afternoon.

French troops have reoccupied Mount Renaud, two miles southwest of Noyon, according to the Temps, which says that the French are approaching Noyon, which is probably in their possession.

The retreat of the Germans, which has been organized by General von Boehn during the last fortnight, will probably be made in two stages, it is said here. The first halt is expected to be behind the Somme and Crezat Canal, and the second will bring the enemy to the line of March 21, from which he launched his great offensive.

Each day accentuates the German defeat and adds to the losses in men, material and prisoners. Since July 18 the Allies have taken well over 100,000 prisoners. The guns captured have numbered more than 1,000, and there also have been vast stores of ammunition.

Where French and British Are Smashing Toward the Somme.



The principal gains in yesterday's fighting were made by the well-co-ordinated offensives of the French, operating from Noyon north to the region of Chaulnes, and the British, who, linking up with their allies' left, pushed eastward north and south of the Somme.

Other gains—all are indicated by horizontal shading—were made by the British on and east of that part of the Hindenburg line lying east and southeast of Arras.

At Chavigny (north of Soissons) American troops advanced their lines somewhat, and at Bazoches (on the Vesle front) repulsed German attacks. Both of these locations are marked by arrows.

HAIG'S NEW GAINS MENACE PERONNE

South of the Somme Fay and Ablaincourt were taken by the British without much difficulty, for the Germans, being hard pressed south of these points by the French, were therefore ready to go with slight persuasion.

Since early this morning storm after storm has been sweeping across this section of France, but, despite the unfavorable weather, the forces in the north have driven deep into the hurriedly arranged enemy defenses, smothering with their fire hordes of the Germans.

These had been thrown into the fighting in this section in an effort to keep the British from penetrating the famous Quéant-Drocourt switch line, which formed the northern continuation of the old Hindenburg line after the British last year beat the Germans back from Arras. This line has been approached in several places and has been reached in at least one place, in the neighborhood of the Sensée River.

The success of this drive here and the breaking through of the old German defense system may have far-reaching effects both in the north and the south.

South of the Scarpe the Canadians finally captured all of Pelves after brisk street fighting, and, pushing eastward, their advanced patrols entered Rémy and Haucourt. The British are well east of Fontaine and the main body of the Germans has retired from Hendecourt eastward.

Fierce Struggle on Road to Cambrai.

Extremely heavy fighting is in progress from a point south of Lens southward across the Scarpe River to the Arras-Cambrai road, but the British are making progress everywhere, beating down the German resistance with steady blows.

At least two new German divisions have just been identified in this fighting, and more may appear before long. But, while they are opposing the Allies and in most cases are battling hard, there have been some instances in which the enemy troops have shown themselves to be excessively nervous, which is as it should be, considering the pounding they have had and are still getting from the British cannon and the defeats they have suffered at the hands of the advancing infantry.

A large German force was brought up to counterattack the British positions east of Monchy. Some of the companies at the last moment, according to prisoners' statements, refused to participate, and the rest went on without them, the British withdrawing 400 yards.

Later the British reattacked, paying particular attention to the flanks, and drove the Germans out. Then a second time the enemy troops were called upon to counterattack. This time, it is reported, the whole body refused, and only a few patrols were seen by the British.

All sorts of troops have been hurled into battle south of the Scarpe, as well as north of that river, but many formations have been finished off almost as soon as they appeared. The ground over which the advance was made today is covered with large numbers of German dead. Just south of the Scarpe one place was carpeted with bodies in field gray.

Official Reports of the Day's Operations

French

PARIS, Aug. 28.

Night Report—The enemy, under our vigorous thrust, retreated precipitately on a front of about thirty kilometers. We have gained the heights on the left bank of the Somme from Cizancourt to the region east of Nesle.

Further south we reached the west bank of the Canal du Nord on the greater part of its course between Nesle and Noyon.

North of the Oise we occupied Suzoy, Pont l'Evêque, Vauchelles, and Porquéricourt.

Our advance today exceeded ten kilometers [about six and one-quarter miles] at certain points. Since morning about forty villages have been retaken. We captured three trains loaded with war material, and took prisoners.

Between the Oise and the Aisne there were spirited engagements. In the region of Juvigny the Americans valiantly repulsed several enemy counterattacks. A powerful German attempt to cross the Vesle south of Bazoches and Fismette likewise was arrested by American units.

Day Report—During the night the French maintained contact with the rearguards of the enemy, and have continued their advance.

North and south of the Avre we have occupied Chaulnes, Omiécourt, Balatre, Roiglise, and Verpillières.

Further south we have penetrated into the wood of Crapeaumesnil and have taken Dives.

This morning we have continued our advance toward the Somme, and north of the Avre we have reached the general line of Licourt, Potte, and Mesnil-le-Petit (just west of the Somme River) and Nesle.

Since yesterday we have taken thirty villages and have realized at the same time an advance of twelve kilometers at certain points.

British

LONDON, Aug. 28.

Night Report — South of the Somme the Australians, pressing the enemy vigorously, have reached the general line of Fresnes-Herbécourt. The enemy is offering stubborn resistance in front of the passages of the river at Bria and Péronne.

On the north bank of the Somme our troops captured Curlu and Hardecourt after hard fighting and are advancing in the direction of Maurepas.

Between Bapaume and the Scarpe our attacks have been continued today, and progress has been made at all points.

The village of Croisilles, where the enemy maintained obstinate resistance, was gradually outflanked by London troops and is now in our hands. English troops fought their way forward toward Vrancourt and southeast of Fontaine-les-Croisilles.

After severe fighting lasting throughout the day the Canadians have successfully driven the enemy from several strongly defended localities and important trench systems and have captured the village of Boiry-Notre Dame and Pelves. A number of prisoners were taken in the course of these operations.

Day Report—Our troops took Foucaucourt, south of the Somme, yesterday. The town had been strongly held by the enemy with machine guns.

North of the Somme we attacked and captured the greater part of Trones Wood, taking a number of prisoners from a Prussian Guard division.

South of the Scarpe, troops of the First Army have improved their positions astride the Arras-Cambrai road and have reached the outskirts of Haucourt, Rémy, and Boiry-Notre Dame.

North of the Scarpe strong hostile counterattacks were launched yesterday afternoon along the line of the Arras-Douai railway, forcing our troops back a few hundred yards to the old German trenches on Greeland Hill, where the enemy attack broke down under fire.

British troops carried out a successful local operation yesterday astride the Neuf Berquin-Estaires road, advancing our line on a front of about four miles and taking a number of prisoners.

German

BERLIN, Aug. 28, (via London.)

North of Bapaume and north of the Somme English attacks broke down with heavy losses.

Between the Somme and the Oise there have been forefield engagements before our new positions.

French attacks north of the Aisne were sanguinarily repulsed.

Day Report—Enemy partial attacks were repulsed near Langemarck and north of the Lys.

General von Below's army was again engaged in heavy fighting yesterday, the centre of gravity of British attack being south of the Scarpe.

On both sides of Bapaume the force of the enemy's attack was less than on previous days. The British, who advanced several times on both sides of the town in surprise attacks with artillery preparation, but without bringing tanks into the action, were driven back everywhere.

By employing masses of tanks and English and Canadian infantry, the enemy again attempted to effect a break through on both sides of the military road between Arras and Cambrai. Our troops, fighting on the line running from Pelves, east of Monchy, and Croisilles—Pomeranian, West Prussian, Hessian, and Alsatian regiments—broke the enemy's thrust, which was delivered early in the morning with enormous superiority in men and material, after bitter fighting immediately east of Pelves and near Vis-en-Artois and Croisilles. In co-operation with Württemberg battalions they caused the enemy's attacks, which were carried forward in the afternoon with fresh forces in deep formation against the military road, to collapse.

Enemy onslaughts several times renewed against Boiry-Notre Dame and northeast of Croisilles also broke down. The enemy suffered the heaviest losses yesterday. Many tanks were destroyed in our front lines by gunfire and minenwerfers.

Our batteries of reserve field artillery, driving in over the open before our infantry, fired at short range into the enemy's dense lines. Toward midday the battle extended to the north bank of the Scarpe and south as far as Mory. The enemy attacks were repulsed here.

North of the Somme the British directed violent attacks against our new lines between Flers and Curlu. We repulsed them, and in a counterattack we captured Flers and Longueval, where the enemy had temporarily penetrated.

Between the Somme and the Oise we withdrew our lines a distance from the enemy, thus giving up to him, without fighting, the heaps of ruins of Chaulnes and Roye.

Owing to our successful defense, the enemy has been forced to discontinue his attacks on this front since Aug. 20. This has rendered it possible to carry out movements without difficulty. They have been accomplished undisturbed during the last few nights.

Between the Oise and the Aisne fighting activity has been confined to minor infantry engagements. On the Vesle Mecklenburg Grenadiers, thanks to the energetic intervention of their leader, First Lieutenant Boelcko, frustrated an attack by Americans against Bazoches. Baden troops took Fismette, in the valley of the Vesle, by storm.

In both enterprises the enemy suffered heavy losses and left more than 250 prisoners in our hands.

GERMAN MACHINE RAPIDLY CRUMBLING

KAISER'S PEOPLE IN TERROR

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Paris has resolutely set itself against being deluded into any belief that the end of the war is in sight, but at the same time the conviction is increasing that we are now witnessing the beginning of the crumbling of the German war machine. Evidence in support of this view is regarded as accumulating in various directions.

There can be no question that the heavy losses the Germans have suffered since the war began have by this time brought their man power perilously near the point of exhaustion. Evidence gathered from literally thousands of prisoners, to say nothing of neutral sources which have been drawn upon, confirms the belief that the German people have now begun seriously to doubt the justice of their cause.

From the same sources there is also ample confirmation that the Kaiser's subjects at last have begun to awaken to the fact that the policy of their ruler has excited the active hatred of the whole world against them and that this hatred will be transformed after the war into a policy of ostracism that will injure beyond repair their whole economic future. There is also every ground for believing that both the army and the people at home have begun to contemplate with a feeling of absolute terror the frightful fact of the imminent entry into the ranks of their enemies of a magnificently prepared American Army millions strong.

With all these adverse factors assuming larger proportions every day, it is regarded here as impossible that German resistance can continue much longer, and although it is generally accepted here that the fifth Winter campaign is inevitable, the majority of the people here are becoming more and more convinced that next Spring will see the final triumph of the Allies.

Special importance attaches here to the latest British attack on the Scarpe because of the menace it offers against a vitally important group of converging lines which affords the enemy his only means of operating strategic concentrations behind his Belgian and northwestern French front. Note on the map the relation between the British attacks on the Scarpe and the great triangle formed by Cambrai, Douai, and Valenciennes. The group of railways in this triangle are the distributing lines down which flow the troops that the enemy brings up through Belgium from time to time when allied pressure calls for it, and from that other great triangle of railways marked by Longwy, Longuyon, and Montmedy down at the other end of what constitutes the real western front to the north of Verdun. Each of these triangles is a complement of the other. All of the strategic reserves are drawn up through one pass and down through the other, or vice versa, as the need may be, according to whichever end of the line is threatened.

Strategically speaking, if the Allies succeed in securing these two triangles of railway communications, German divisions at either end would be cut off from those at the other. It is vital, therefore, that the Germans retain at any cost their positions on the Scarpe. This is more than sufficient reason to lead us to expect that the British on the Arras front will have to expect exceptionally stubborn fighting in the immediate future and that the progress of that section of the battlefront will most probably be unusually difficult.

GOMPERS IN LONDON ON LABOR MISSION

Wants Unity for War, but Not Seeking to Set British Labor Party Straight.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Samuel Gompers, President of the American Federation of Labor, and his party arrived here today from the United States. Mr. Gompers issued a statement calculated to do something toward removing certain erroneous notions as to the object of the visit.

Dispatches cabled from New York here conveyed the impression that the British Labor Party as a whole was considered in America to be, if not faint-hearted in support of the prosecution of the war, at least dangerously inclined to make a compromise peace, and that Mr. Gompers was coming over to show the party the error of its ways. Misunderstandings which might arise out of such a situation are obvious.

In this connection it may be useful to correct the statement which apparently is being circulated in America that "Arthur Henderson plans to elect 400 Labor men to the British Parliament and make himself Premier, so that a speedy peace can be effected." This entirely misrepresents Henderson's attitude in regard to peace negotiations and is equally beside the mark in its suggestion of a Labor majority in case of a general election in the Fall.

LONDON, Aug. 28, (Associated Press.) Mr. Gompers was welcomed on behalf of the Government by George Nicoll Barnes, a member of the War Cabinet, and other labor leaders.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Samuel Gompers left Washington several weeks ago after a series of conferences with other labor leaders. He was accompanied by John P. Frey, editor of The International Molders' Union Journal; William Bowen, President of the Bricklayers' International Union; Charles L. Baine, Secretary of the International Boot and Shoe Workers' Union; Edgar Wallace, formerly editor of The Mineworkers' Journal, and Guy H. Oyster, Secretary of the commission.

Mr. Gompers will attend the British Trade Union Congress, which will meet early in September, and also an allied labor conference which is to be held either in London or Paris, Sept. 17, 18, and 19. A statement issued by the American Federation of Labor headquarters today said:

"The purpose of Mr. Gompers in going abroad is twofold—to comply with the instructions of the convention of the American Federation of Labor in St. Paul in June and to lend his influence toward more closely uniting the workers of the allied nations to win the war. To secure unity for victory is his sole aim and hope."

The War Situation

BY THE MILITARY EXPERT OF THE NEW YORK TIMES.

As was stated in yesterday's review, it was inevitable that the Germans would have to retire to the Canal du Nord. The line before Chaulnes, apparently impregnable to direct attack except with losses beyond its military value, has been taken by the apparently simple expedient of flanking it out. The French drove across the Roye-Liancourt road beyond Cremery; the British drove eastward as far as the outskrits of Dompiere.

In both cases the two extremities of these operations were well beyond the Chaulnes line. The wedges were growing deeper, threatening to pin the Germans against the Canal du Nord on the south and the Somme River on the north. Chaulnes therefore had to be evacuated.

What has really been happening in the area between the French lines and these water barriers is just what has been expected generally. The Germans were doing the same thing they did when anchored behind the Ourcq in the battle of the Marne—holding fast in order to give the troops in their rear an opportunity to remove as much of the artillery as possible and to transfer or destroy the ammunition dumps preparatory to a retreat.

Apparently the French in yesterday's fighting had but little real fighting to do as compared with the previous days. The Germans were ready to retire and fell back of the canals. It is the visible evidence of the extent of the allied victory. The Germans did not retreat from choice. They were forced to do so by a bitter necessity. It was the lesser of two evils.

In the south, about Noyon, the Germans have suffered a serious loss as a result of this enforced retrograde movement. In between the Divette River and the Roye-Noyon road is the powerful massif of Noyon, mentioned yesterday, the most important features of which are the Bois de la Reserve and the mountain of Porquericourt. These protected Noyon perfectly from the west and northwest. To have attempted to force these positions would have cost tremendously in men, if, indeed, it could have been accomplished at all. But all this the Germans have been forced to abandon practically without a fight.

The French were not slow to take advantage of the situation, but immediately drove in toward Noyons, cutting in from the south between Noyon and the mountain of Porquericourt and taking the villages of Vauchelles and Porquericourt itself. Mt. Renaud, just south of Pont l'Evêque, the most important position in the south, also has been taken. Noyon itself has not been taken, however, although the French lines are on the outskirts of the city.

Noyon lies on the north bank of the Oise about a mile north of the Oise Canal and just to the east of the Canal du Nord. It is excellently screened therefore by these bodies of water, so that its actual capture will be difficult. At the same time, if the Germans attempt to hold such a sharp angle as that which exists between the Canal du Nord and the Oise with the French north of the Oise at Pont l'Evêque, they are apt to have material difficulty. Noyon, however, is but a point which is now without a great deal of meaning. The proximity of the French lines is such that it has no value to either side.

There is another reason why it would not be worth much of a sacrifice to take. If it has any value at all in the allied commander's eyes it can only be as a jumping-off place for a new offensive. But no new offensive can be begun from such a point, partly because the width of front is not sufficient and partly because of the character of the terrain immediately to the east.

In the angle between the Noyons-Ham road and the Noyons-Chauny road is another of those masses of steep hills, with broad, wooded tops, the axis of which almost exactly bisects this angle. This angle is therefore practically immune from attack, making another flanking operation, and a much more difficult one, necessary.

On the British front, between Chaulnes and Bapaume, the German retreat has also made itself apparent. While south of the Somme the Germans have not gone back to the same depth as on the French front, the British report of last night gives the distinct impression that the Germans also are retreating, with the evident intention of going back to the Somme in the immediate future.

While the British report does not mention a retreat beyond Herbecourt, it would seem that the British commander has reason to believe that the German main body is falling back to the river between Peronne and Brie, but is guarding heavily the approaches to the river at these points until all of the forces are safely across. The Germans, however, are reaching a point where they are too close to the river for comfort. There does not appear to be any reason why they should try to halt west of the river for more than a short time. There is every reason why they should continue their retreat to the east bank.

Further north the Canadians are deepening the wedge they have started between the Sencee and the Scarpe. This move, if continued, will play an important part in turning the Germans out of the region north of Bapaume.

AMERICAN LOSSES HEAVY, SAYS FOE

Despite stubborn enemy resistance, General Mangin is pressing steadily eastward across the Juvigny plateau toward the Soissons-St. Quentin road and his guns already are in position there to take in the rear the German artillery supporting the line of the Vesle from the great limestone buttress northeast of Soissons.

This buttress is not only of great importance to the Vesle line, but is also the strongest of the flank defenses by which the western end of the Chemm des Dames is covered. That is why the Germans are making such determined efforts to retain it.

Last year the apparently impregnable position of the Germans on the ridge line was turned from the westward. The prospect of a recurrence of this misfortune naturally is alarming, in face of what is happening elsewhere.

AMERICANS ADVANCE LINE NEAR SOISSONS

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 28.—The attack of the Americans against the Germans northwest of Soissons began shortly after 7 o'clock this morning, and within an hour the first objectives, aggregating about two-thirds of mile, had been obtained north and east of Chavigny.

The Germans counterattacked, but with the exception of a small part of one wing the American line held steady. Where it gave way, about 300 yards, the withdrawal was due to the necessity of straightening the line.

The fighting, which for the most part involved the artillery, continued throughout the day and was still going on tonight.

The early action of the Americans was part of a plan carefully made and carefully carried out. It was preceded by artillery preparation, and the infantry advanced under a vigorous barrage.

The Americans moved northward over the brow of the long plateau—a part of that plateau separating the Aisne and the Vesle further to the east, the possession of which would make difficult the tenure of the positions of that part of the German army which moved northward from the Marne.

There was little infantry resistance by the Germans, who are clinging to their recently adopted tactics of retreat, with the establishment of machine gun echelons supported by artillery.

The American artillery, acting with the French, smashed into the enemy, and tonight the lighter field pieces were firing point-blank from an open field on the plateau.

In the action the Americans captured ninety-two prisoners, although they played a comparatively minor part on a front of about two kilometers, with French troops on either side. It was the first time that American forces had been used north of the Aisne.

The prisoners taken were from one of the Jaeger divisions. They were from a detachment that was cut off and enfiladed by the fire of the advancing Americans and surrendered. Among the prisoners were two officers.

PATROL FIGHTS IN WOEVRE.

Americans, Surrounded, Drive Out Foe and Get Prisoners.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 28, (Associated Press.)—An American patrol of nineteen men and one officer was encircled in the Woevre region Tuesday night, but drove at the Germans and captured a Sergeant and two privates. It is believed that they inflicted casualties on the enemy.

Early this morning another patrol attacked and drove out an enemy detachment which had been occupying at night the same outpost that the Americans occupied in the day time.

ESTIMATE ITALY'S NEEDS.

America Will Send Wheat, Meat, and Rolling Stock.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

ROME, Aug. 28.—The statement made by Food Administrator Hoover upon his landing in America has been widely published by the Italian press, causing great satisfaction and admiration for America's generous contribution to the war. Mr. Hoover's work has been carried on here with great tact and ability by his representatives, Frederic Collin Walcott and James Ford Bell, who visited all parts of the country to study its resources, needs, transportation, and ports.

They made a complete estimate of Italy's requirements, including her provisions for Winter, both for the army and civil population. What is especially wanted is wheat, meat, fuel, and rolling stock.

German Meeting Applauds Wilson.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—The German Empress, who has been ill for several days, has taken a turn for the worse, according to a message received in Amsterdam from Düsseldorf and forwarded to the Exchange Telegraph Company. The message adds that her heart displays increasing weakness.

Emperor William has not been able to leave the bedside of his wife, who is at the castle at Wilhelmshöhe. It is said that no bulletin on the Empress's condition will be published in order not to alarm the people.

Earlier reports received through Amsterdam intimated that the Empress's condition had improved.

STOWAWAY WIVES ON TORPEDOED SHIP

DISCOVERED IN A LIFEBOAT

Copyright, 1918, by The Chicago Tribune Co.

A FRENCH PORT, Aug. 28.—Even war is not able to drive romance from the seas and the world. German submarines, floating mines, seventy-five-mile guns, and liquid fire have turned the once glorious game into one of terror, mud, and death; but romance will not be killed.

For proof take this story of the wives of two fighting men who this day came to France in answer to the long call, who came stowaways on a steel cargo ship's maiden voyage, who were discovered when the boat was torpedoed and sinking, who were rescued by a destroyer, and who are now in this French port waiting to be sent home; but with fair wind and high hearts they will come again—these wives who would see their soldiers, whether a paternal but stern Government rules against it or not.

To start this story we must jump from this colorful old port, crowded with the soldiers and sailors of all nations, and go back to busy New York Harbor. Two very determined and homesick and romantic wives of American soldiers in France were there spending hours about the docks, wistfully watching the ships slip down the harbor bound for "over there."

One was the wife of Captain Leslie Garner of the Ammunition Train and the other was the wife of Second Lieutenant Frank M. Jones of the field artillery. They wanted, more than anything else in the world, to see their husbands and be near them; but Uncle Sam said no. At that time, the first week in August, there was no possible way for a soldier's wife to come to France, no matter in what capacity.

So it was that late one night in August, by means fair or foul, the two girls slipped aboard one of the Shipping Board's new cargo boats and were hustled down into the deep black hold, where there was piled thousands of tons of good white American flour for the fighting doughboys. The same friendly "Bob" that had brought them on board found two cot mattresses for them and a pair of blankets, and twice each day thereafter he would slip down with stolen food and fresh water. He was their sole guide, comforter, and philosopher.

The morning after the young women went on board they found that the ship was moving, and by night they knew they were well out to sea. These first days it was calm, but they were long, long days. It was always dark below, and the air grew stale and stuffy. But the drone of the screw shaft was a song to them—they were on their way to France and through great adventure some way they would see the men whom they had risked so much to be with. No crusader ever went forth with stouter hearts or braver vows.

On the eleventh day out the sea kicked up a nasty storm, which continued for several days. These were times of fear and torture to these two. Each hour was a day long and each day was like a month. Then the storm settled, but there was engine trouble, and suddenly the ship stopped. Their watches said it was 6 o'clock in the evening. Several hours later their bribed seaman came.

Another ship in the convoy had been torpedoed just at the time that their own engines had broken down, he said. The rest of the convoy had gone on, while they were standing motionless with one destroyer guarding them.

"I wish you women were back in New York where you belong," he said. "There's a regular nest of subs around here. I'm going to hide you up near the deck and stay close by you the rest of the night, so that if anything happens I can get you to a lifeboat. Come on."

So frightened and worn out by their long trip of terror, they followed him to a little hidden niche below decks. It was near a ladder to the main deck, where there were lifeboats. For hours they crouched with the sailor standing by. The minute before midnight they heard shouts echoing down from the bridge. Then there was a blinding, smashing "boom," and a great explosion when everything seemed to be tossed into the air and thrown about like a giant kicking a doll's house.

The ship shuddered and settled, but before it straightened a second torpedo struck. Everything was black now, the water was rushing in, and there was a smell of explosives everywhere, and shouts and cries. Before they could move, the two girls were standing in water up to their knees and were frozen with terror. Then they heard the sailor calling them. Then his strong hands gripped them.

He half dragged them up the ladder to the deck. The brave little destroyer was dropping its depth bombs ond laying a barrage around the hidden submarine, and as each bomb exploded fifty or sixty feet under the surface it threw a great mountain of water that looked in the starlit night like some gigantic geyser.

In less than a minute the sailor planted his two charges in a lifeboat, where they lay sobbing. The ship was settling rapidly now. Already it was almost down to the deck line. In another three minutes the lifeboat had its crew. It was swung down and shoved off and the men rowed a hundred feet from the torpedoed ship. By the light from the stars and the faint quarter moon they could see other boats being lowered and pulled away. Ten minutes passed, then the last one pulled away.

The two men remaining behind to the last jumped overboard and swam to the nearest lifeboat. The ship settled to its main deck and went no lower. It was like a miracle, it brought back hope and spirits. They began calling from one boat to another and rowing slowly around the ship. The destroyer was there, darting and scurrying and searching for subs, and as the sea was smooth it would not stop to pick up the survivors. The morning, they knew, would bring help and rescue.

The sailors began to joke and sing little snatches of songs. Slowly the men in this first boat became conscious of stifled crying. One of them located it and shouted a demand to know what it was. Thus it was that others besides the lone sailor found two stowaways cuddling in the bottom of the big lifeboat.

"Well, poor little scared kids," old Captain Carter, master of all the seven seas, declared, reaching down and setting them gently on seats. "You're all saved, and it's all over. Pretty soon the destroyers will pick us up, and when you get all ready and feel like it you can tell us how you got here."

So it was that the story of the girls who wanted to come to France was first repeated while they were sitting in a lifeboat watching their sinking ship and while the stars told the destroyers the way. Some day even wars will end; but as long as women love men and have youth in their hearts romance will go on.

English Crop Acreage Largest Yet.

LONDON, Aug. 28, (Canadian Press.)—The Board of Agriculture announces that the arable area in England and Wales amounts to 12,400,000 acres, an increase of 1,152,000 acres compared with the area in 1917 and a record for twenty years. The wheat acreage has been increased by 638,000 acres and is a record since 1884. Oats have increased by 23 per cent., corn and pulse 24 per cent., and potatoes by 25 per cent. All are records.

AMERICANS, GASSED, DO TRUCK GARDENING

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

PARIS, Aug. 29.—Many unexpected things follow the flag in this war. For example, fresh green vegetables go to American soldiers at the front. One of the big park areas, paid for by Louis XIV. at Versailles is now a great truck farm, operated by nearly three hundred convalescent American soldiers. Sixty per cent. of these men have been gassed. It has been discovered by medical authorities that the best thing for men recovering from a gas attack is light work in the open air. Hence the truck farms.

One farm I visited at Versailles contains 350 acres, and has soldiers working it, all of whom have been transferred from fighting units to the supply service of the Quartermaster's Department. As a result of skillful gardening methods great camions filled with new potatoes, cabbages, peas and beans are sent off to the front nearly every day.

Herman Devine, formerly a teacher in the New Jersey Agricultural College, and now an army Sergeant, is the agricultural expert in charge of the work. The men are not only raising vegetables this year, but seedlings to transplant to other army gardens back of the lines. The plan for future development includes poultry and cows to give an abundant supply of fresh eggs and milk for the soldiers in hospitals. All told 3,000 acres are to be used.

Five young American women are working with the soldiers in the Versailles farm as student gardeners to gain experience for their later work of reclamation in devastated regions of Northern France.

The gardeners are under watch of medical officers who see that no convalescent works in the field longer than is good for him, and plenty recreation is provided.

While I was at the farm a Sergeant called my attention to a group of soldiers going toward a woods, explaining that they were going for a swim. I asked, "Where?"

"Over in old Louis' swimming pool," he said, "one of those that Louis made in this park. He was the fourteenth in the batch. He had a lot of favorite girls out her at Versailles with him. When any of them wanted anything he would build her a new palace with a lot of woods, gardens, and lakes around it. Now us Yanks are swimming in those lakes.

"This is a great country. See that long wall over there beyond the cabbage patch where we got all that manure from the artillery stables piled up for the gardens? Well, one of the girls wanted that wall for something. Louis built it."

REPORTS EX-CZARINA SAFE IN THE CRIMEA

Swede Who Was in German Army There Says the Ex-Czarevitch Is with Her.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Thursday, Aug. 29.—The following message from Stockholm signed "Hanson" and in French, has been received by the Daily News:

"I report under reserve a story published by the Svenska Dagbladet on the authority of a certain Erbs, conductor of a Swedish band, who has been serving as a volunteer at the German front in the Crimea, and who has arrived in Stockholm on leave. Erbs states that the ex-Czarina, with the ex-Czarevitch and her daughters, has been living in perfect safety in the Crimea since May, that they have never been in Siberia, and that all official reports to the contrary have been manufactured for political purposes.

"As for the ex-Czar, Erbs knows nothing definite, but mentions a rumor that he is alive and lives in security in a German town. The ex-Czarina would not be disposed to go to Germany, but has sent her jewels there."

BORDER FIRING RESUMED AT NOGALES

NOGALES, Ariz., Aug. 28.—Firing across the international boundary line was resumed about 9:55 o'clock tonight. After fifteen or twenty shots were fired from the Mexican side of the border a general alarm was sounded on the Arizona side of the line and the mobilization of troops and civilians followed immediately. American forces here were increased this afternoon by the arrival of new units.

Notification that he would cross the line if another shot was fired by the Mexicans was sent tonight by Brig. Gen. De Rosey Cabell, commander of the American forces, to General P. Elias Calles, Military Governor of Sonora.

The notification was sent to General Calles by General Cabell through the Mexican Consul and the American Consul at Nogales, Sonora, when firing was resumed on the Mexican side of the border after regrets had been offered by the Mexican officials under an armistice effected after cessation of firing on Tuesday.

In the firing from the Mexican side of the border tonight, one American enlisted man, whose name was not immediately obtainable, was wounded.

Mutual expressions of regret over yesterday's border fighting were exchanged today by General Cabell and General Calles, representing the American and Mexican Governments. They met on a bridge spanning a dry wash which is a part of the international line. General Calles came here from Hermosillo at the orders of President Carranza, and General Cabell hastened from Douglas.

GASOLINE SAVING TO BE MILLIONS OF GALLONS

Fuel Administration Officials Estimate 8,000,000 Weekly —Relief Expected Soon.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Fuel Administration officials estimated today that nearly 8,000,000 gallons of gasoline will be saved each Sunday through non-use of motor vehicles on those days as requested yesterday by Administrator Garfield. East of the Mississippi River there are approximately 4,000,000 motor-driven vehicles. Of these 200,000 are trucks to which the restrictions do not apply. The estimated saving is based on the use of an average of two gallons of gasoline for each car of the 3,800,000 cars affected.

The Fuel Administration was deluged today by inquiries telegraphed by automobile owners seeking information about the call to lay up their cars on Sundays until further notice.

By PHILIP GIBBS.

right. Our observers have seen the Germans running out of Bullecourt. We ought to get the place in a couple of hours."

These troops have done gallantly since they came into this battle on Aug. 23. They had an eight hours' march over rough ground and went straight into the attack against Boyelles and Boiry de Courelles, which they captured easily with 700 prisoners. The lads were very tired after three nights without sleep and with little water, and had hard fighting on the way to Croisilles, and a worse time afterward outside the village, where they found themselves under the incessant sweep of machine gun bullets from the village, which was crammed with German machine gunners.

They tried to rush the place several times, but were checked by that infernal fire. Other bodies of them got up toward the Hindenburg line, helped by Scots, who came round to the north of Croisilles and through the Hindenburg line yesterday and threatened to encircle the village.

The Germans in Croisilles saw this menace and their machine gun teams filtered out of it under British gunfire, which killed many of them before they could escape.

Yesterday one of the British officers mounted his horse and rode very calmly and quietly into that stronghold. He found it deserted, so that it was then occupied by the British.

Two platoons of these troops had a queer and hazardous adventure on the way up. At a place called Fooley Trench they found they plunged into a hornet's nest with machine guns on each side of them, and a special smoke barrage had to be put up for them so that they could get back behind its veil.

"They were as good as the guards," said some of the guards themselves on the morning of the recent attack, and that is praise worth having from men who have a fine pride in themselves. Their officers can not say too much in admiration of these boys, who, after long and hard fighting in earlier battles, have gone forward again with such high spirits and patient courage and grim striking power.

Way Open for New Advance.

The capture of Croisilles is of big importance to the general scheme of things, opening the way to a further advance on Bullecourt. It forces the enemy back to the Drocourt-Queant line, which he will hold for a time if he can with a kind of outer bastion of trenches swinging in a loop, which leaves Bullecourt on the British side of it.

The situation yesterday remained in favor of the British despite efforts by the enemy to beat back the attack and retake some of his lost ground. The Highlanders north of the Scarpe had held on to Roeux with its famous and horrible ruin of chemical works. Just beyond and south of the river the British are on the Wancourt Ridge, well east of Monchy Hill and 300 yards or so west of the high wood called the Bois de Sart. The Canadians day before yesterday had made a general advance of 6,000 yards, with the capture of 2,000 prisoners and about fifty guns.

All this had frightened the enemy command, and they made frantic efforts to stiffen the resisting power of their lines, but owing to the rapidity of the British advance and their heavy losses they had great difficulty in reinforcing their defense. They had to goad up divisions and bits of divisions already cut to pieces in the recent fighting. Odd battalions and companies were mixed together in a chaotic way and told to go forward and fight. The German bandsmen and transport drivers received rifles and were sent into the lines with orders to stand or die.

In an area of three miles there were sixteen battalions made up from five shattered divisions and hopelessly mixed round about Montauban. Further north, by Mory and Cherisy, the 36th and 23d German Divisions, both divisions of storm troops, had been so smashed that another division which had been already in the bloody fighting, so that many companies went down to twenty-five men instead of 120, had to be sent up in their support.

Before their counterattack at Mory on Aug. 22, the 17th German Army command issued a boasting order which said: "We have completely defeated four and a half British divisions and, what is more, they know it." Four of their divisions were ordered forward to counterattack and retake Moyenneville and Ablainzeville, but only a few men got to the railway and there were many nonstarters, as the British say. Those who did attempt to advance were caught by our artillery and slaughtered. One battalion near St. Leger found that regiments on the right and left of them had failed and it was stranded.

Losses Dispirit Foe.

The British troops saw the situation of these men and surrounded them so that they were forced to surrender in a mass to the number of 215. The company commander of the 73d Fusiliers, whose nose seems to have been broken by his men, was furious at having been sent into the fighting line after the dreaful slaughter of his regiment, and cursed his command in strong language. Prisoners also complained of their party firing as much as 600 yards short, and so killing their own men.

Two new German divisions were brought up against the Canadians yesterday, and the 35th, which had been manning the Drocourt-Queant line, was ordered to go forward at 7 o'clock last night and retake Monchy, that high old hill which I saw this morning under fire, but still securely in British hands. Again there were many nonstarters.

By the results of this attempted attack one can picture truly enough the sullen revolt of the dispirited men. Some units came forward under the sweep of the British guns, whose fire was enormously stronger than theirs in this part of the line, and fell under one of those slopes of death. A few resolute bodies of men made as much as 400 yards of ground and there stayed, being wiped out man by man.

Once again the 35th German Division was ordered to advance on Monchy, but after a disorganized effort by the bravest men they drifted back. For a time, at any rate, the German infantry, apart from the machine gunners, who were still most gallant and resolute, lost their spirit and had enough of this rearguard fighting and counterattacking in weak numbers.

A rout began among them which will lead to greater disasters for the German Army unless they can be rallied and refreshed. The British will not give them any holiday or help them with a rest cure.

Between the Oise and the sea the German command has not many divisions fit to fight apart from those dreadfully hammered and tired beyond the breaking point of human courage. They must be at their wits' end thinking hard in vain what they may do next.

The British themselves were in no good state after the weeks following March 21, as I described at the time. The men had to fight again and again until they were terribly tired and weak, but reserves came up in time and are here with them now. The Germans have at the moment no such reserves, and they know that the American Army has waiting for them large legions of fresh, fighting men ready to strike at the right moment.

Canadians Push Hard.

At 10 o'clock yesterday morning the Canadians attacked, and after hard fighting took Cherisy, and then in the afternoon went forward again in a big sweep and captured Vis-en-Artois. The Germans blew up the bridge across the Cojeuil River, but this did not stop the Canadians.

Vis-en-Artois, like Croisilles, was stiff with machine guns, and the fields were swept with bullets from the cemetery and another trench outside the village, but with rifle, bayonet, and machine gun the Canadian storming parties broke this defense, divided the village between two separate units of their force, and sent out patrols to the enemy at Haucourt and Boiry Notre Dame, which are far out in the open country beyond any point the British have reached in this region during the whole war.

Meanwhile, on the north of the Scarpe, the Scottish troops had gone forward from Roeux and captured Pelves and the whole British line, from north of the Scarpe to the country below Croisilles, is moving forward today, driving the enemy in front of it. The Scottish troops took Fontaine Les Croisilles, and, with the English troops, are going well ahead.

Undoubtedly this move will be checked for a time in front of the Drocourt-Queant line, which is very strong and well defended by every German regiment which can be brought up.

This advance gives a sense of the enormous movement behind the British lines and there is not a man who is not stirred by the motion of it. They are feeling that they indeed are getting on with the war. It is like a vast tide of life moving very slowly but steadily.

Up the roads the transport goes with ammunition and food and water for the fighting lines. There are miles and miles of moving columns with "Ole Bill" and his mates smoking their fags. The engineers are working in a heroic way laying new lines, mending old ones torn up by the enemy in his retreat, rebuilding bridges that have been wrecked by explosive charges or the British fire, and salvaging the material of war left behind in the German hurry.

Captured Stores Regained.

At Pozières and elsewhere the British have regained many of their old ammunition dumps, with valuable stores, which will come in use again. Everywhere over the old ground now recaptured there are clumps of British shells, and the earth is littered with them, lying in piles and gleaming in the rain and sun. So fast have the engineers worked that trains are now puffing up into places taken only a few days ago, and this morning I saw how all the pioneers and railway men and labor battalions, like an enormous army of ants, are working on those old battlefields to make a little order out of chaos and get on with the war, like the riflemen who are walking in front of them.

Life is resumed in the fields and villages, which for the Summer months have been places of the great dearth. Today I saw men cooking food in parts of houses without roofs, and on the lee side of shell-broken walls where only three days ago there was the menace of immediate slaughter to any living thing that passed that way.

Things are going on well, but for good or ill the Briton remains the same. As I saw him today in those places he was imperturbable, industrious, glad to get any comfort a man may find amid ruins, and doing his job whatever it may be without worry.

GERMAN DIVISION SHATTERED AT ROYE

By WALTER DURANTY.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Aug. 27.—At 8 o'clock this morning the troops of General Debeney's army entered Saint Gilles, a suburb of Roye, 300 yards south of the town. At the moment of cabling Roye is perhaps entirely in French hands. [The capture of Roye has been announced in subsequent dispatches.] The success is the result of determined fighting against obstinate resistance. Its effects may be of great importance in accentuating the pressure toward Nesle, which might permit the Allies to turn the Massif northeast of Noyon from the north, and perhaps later, if the British operations continue favorable, form the basis for action against the southern end of the Hindenburg and Siegfried lines.

During the night the enemy reacted his utmost to stay the French advance of yesterday, which had occupied the line from Fresnoy to the region of Dancourt.

At 11 P. M. a strong attack was launched from Roye upon Saint Mard in the French centre, due west of the city. It was bloodily repulsed in the ravine running from Saint Mard to Laucourt Village, northeast of Dancourt.

The French are at Dancourt. French machine guns on the slopes took heavy toll of the enemy as the latter tried to mount westward; and having been filled with dense volumes of French and German gas the position of the enemy battalion was rendered untenable. A few hundred survivors threw down their arms shortly before dawn and went to swell the total of 1,100 prisoners, including two battalion commanders, it was reported at 8 A. M. today.

Another attempt later to relieve the pressure on Laucourt by a counterstroke north of the village by one company from Roye was intercepted and the company surrendered.

At 5 o'clock the French attacked on a line almost perpendicular north and south of Roye. The surrounded garrison at Laucourt Village offered small resistance. Despite the obstacles presented by wire entanglements of the former French and German lines as they existed southwest of Roye in February of last year, the attack progressed along the whole front. Patrols reached Crapeaumesnil east of Roye on the south.

The whole action is a typical example of successful local operations by the French armies which have contributed so greatly in the past two months to the subsequent big-scale victories. While the French losses are very moderate, at least one more German division has been so shattered as to be useless henceforth.

GERMAN PRISONERS CRITICISE OFFICERS

By G. H. PERRIS.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

WITH THE FRENCH ARMIES, Aug. 27.—Roye—that is to say the narrow ridge behind the little town, itself pulverized long ago—has had no value since the French got within gunfire, save that of an outwork on a post of arrest. Its garrison and neighboring troops have been sacrificed to permit the clearance of the rear. General von Eben told them as long ago as Aug. 2, in an army order just taken on the battlefield, that they must be prepared to put up a strong defense without considerable reinforcements "as the commanding chief has decided that the constitution of the army will not be modified in the immediate future."

Débeney's unexpected blow may have changed his dispositions, but at best the boches at Roye have had an inglorious time. They suffered heavily in trying to accomplish what they were told, and their situation at the last was very unenviable.

I remember very well that ground between Roye and Ham over which we hurried with the French foreguard, in March of last year, short of the Somme—and that is 15 miles at least. There are no natural lines of defense, and it is 15 miles of German mud and desert.

This time there is no Hindenburg superstition to stiffen the drooping spirits of the beaten army and the home population. The armies are now of a very different stuff.

"The German soldier," a staff officer said to me, "is not today what he was three months ago or even in the middle of July. We still meet among the prisoners some arrogant and obstinate officers, but the great majority are tired of a war to which they can see no favorable issue. The men criticise the lower command and talk of hesitation, and of contradictory orders. They altogether lack homogeneity. Many are physically feeble youth, and in bad condition. Repulse and losses, insufficient food and bad reports from home, have produced general depression, and if it shows rather a spirit of fatalism than revolt it is none the less a bad military influence."

The ill-feeling between the Prussians and Bavarians seems to increase. The effectives are generally far below proper strength and in every way their quality is worsened.

To get behind the Somme would give a breathing space, but the German Army wants much more than such a hope as that.

112,000 PRISONERS TAKEN SINCE JULY 1

Gen. March Also Reports That Allies Have Captured 1,300 Pieces of Artillery.

ENEMY LOSES VAST STORES

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—General March, Chief of Staff, announced today that since July 1 the allied forces engaged in the fighting on the western front have captured 112,000 prisoners and taken more than 1,300 heavy guns. By heavy guns General March explained that he meant field guns and those of larger calibre. The Allies also have captured vast quantities of stores and ammunition and thousands of machine guns, minenwerfers, and small weapons.

A fraction more than half the ground gained by the Germans since March 21 last in their advances between Rheims and Arras has been recovered by the British, French, American, Australian, and Canadians forces. Not only have the Germans been driven back beyond the old Hindenburg line of 1916-17, but they also have crossed the new Hindenburg line for a distance of one mile on a front of three miles.

In his talk to newspaper men today General March said:

"When I spoke to you last Saturday, the British drive on the front between the Scarpe and the Somme was carrying the allied lines forward over the hilly plains east of Albert. The Allies advanced Saturday and Sunday, in spite of more or less determined resistance by the enemy. On Monday the British captured the heights east of Arras, known as Orange Hill, and on Tuesday continued along the Arras-Cambrai road to a depth of five miles. This advance of the British overran the so-called Hindenburg line a distance of one mile on a front of three miles.

"On Tuesday the pressure by the British spread along a front of forty miles, down to the junction with the French line.

"In the meantime the French began a new offensive opposite Roye on a ten-mile front and went forward a distance of two miles. The railroad junction at Roye, a very important point, fell into the hands of the Allies, and also the ground east of it, which is quite high and very important. So the total width of the line of battle yesterday was about fifty miles.

"This morning the French, according to their official statement, have made a deep salient in this line, cutting out and putting between the pincers a new salient of the German lines. They have reached Nesle and are now within two miles of the Somme.

"The British are still making further progress beyond the Hindenburg line east of Arras and further gains on the Flanders front.

"In Albania an Austrian attack succeeded in driving back the Italians several miles in the region about Berat, which they gave up on our recent offensive, restoring a part of the line.

"With reference to the general fighting which has been going on, the number of prisoners captured by the Allies from July 1 to date is about 112,000 and the number of heavy guns taken—by guns I mean field guns and higher—is over 1,300."

The greatest satisfaction is expressed is military circles here over the progress of the Allied plan of campaign. Army officers assert that General Foch is playing a most masterly game, pointing out that at no stage has he taken any chances of his plans falling through as a result of attempting too much at one time, and that, while his objective is the German Army and its defeat, he has been proceeding on the theory that some months will elapse before the decisive blow can be delivered.

General Foch's campaign has been one of constant application of pressure in German lines through the harmonious use of the allied armies and their resources, and keeping the enemy busy over a very long front and guessing all the time. The various blows that have been thus far struck in the campaign have been thoroughly corelated and the plan of campaign has been a complete success up to the present moment. Army officers are now confident that General Foch will be able to drive the Germans back of the line where they stood last Spring before the opening of the series of German drives which lasted from March 21 until the Allies took the offensive at the beginning of July.

FAILS TO PLACATE NORWAY.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 28.—Germany has declared a willingness to pay damages to Norway if ships in the Government service are sunk without warning outside the danger zone.

The Tidens Tegn emphasizes that if the ships are sunk with warning, and after inspection, the circumstances are much more aggravating because the submarines then had certainly known the ships were bringing provisions to a neutral country. Germany ought to cover the loss of tonnage with her own ships, and, of course, pay damages to the survivors.

VON STEIN REPROVES DEJECTED GERMANS

War Minister Points to France, Where, He Says, All Believe in Victory.

TALES OF DISASTER SPREAD

Staff Officer Says Our Transports Are "Difficult Targets"—Hammer Blows Abandoned.

LONDON, Aug. 28, (British Wireless Service.)—Since the Entente Allies have wrested the initiative from General Ludendorff on the western front the effect on the German people is such that it has been necessary to apply continuous verbal stimulants and they are officially exhorted to "be men" and to "be stout-hearted."

There has been more than a suggestion of panic and it has been necessary for General von Stein, the Prussian War Minister, to fill more than three columns in the Berlin newspapers with reproaches to the people who credit and repeat fantastic rumors of disasters. It appears to have been freely stated, among other things, that Germany has lost 150,000 prisoners in the recent fighting and that the German troops have been betrayed.

General von Stein tells the Germans to look at France for an example. He says:

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 28.—America has been able to transport more than 1,000,000 soldiers to France because they have been carried in small, swift steamers which offered very difficult targets for the torpedoes of submarines, said Captain Zimmerman of the German General Staff in a lecture at Breslau on the military situation, according to the Rhenish Westphalian Gazette of Essen. He said that these steamers were escorted by warships.

The Captain said that there were 440,000 Americans at the front and 700,000 more behind the lines.

The recent progress of the Allies the Captain attributed to the mass employment of tanks, which had yielded initial sucesses, but, he declared, means had now been found to master them.

Captain von Salzmann, who is usually intrusted with the task of preparing the German people for a change of policy, elaborately explains, in an article written for the Vossische Zeitung of Berlin, that German attempts to force a decision by means of hammer blows were really abandoned on July 15. Captain von Salzmann says:

"Even the recent considerable tactical successes of the Entente nations cannot alter the fact that Field Marshal von Hindenburg has brought nearer the end of the war, which England and America are endeavoring to prolong as much as possible.

"Apart from consideration of loss or gain of ground, it is to the advantage of the Germans to entice the enemy into the trackless, roadless, and waterless waste of the Somme.

"It must be admitted that England was the first to turn the war into a world war. Thus Premier Lloyd George, Field Marshal von Hindenburg's great opponent, as so often before, is endeavoring to shift the centre of gravity of England and Germany at the beginning of the twentieth century. Germany, a purely Continental power, fights for Europe, while England, a world power for centuries, is fighting all over the world.

"It is to her interest to establish an equilibrium on the western front and seek partial decisions elsewhere. Final decision must be made in France.

"Germany is just as ready to adopt a new policy as to adopt new military tactics. Germany must, however, realize that England's history clearly shows she can learn her lesson. Striking proof of this is afforded by her successful resistance to the last German offensive. Germany's problem in the fifth year of the war can be solved only if she is able to find new ways and methods in the political as well as military sphere."

Lieut. Gen. Baron von Ardenne writes in the Düsseldorf Nachrichten that "the German Army and nation now face dark hours. May God protect the Fatherland.

"The period from Aug. 20 to 28 has been one of the trying tests of this hardest of wars," the critic continues, but he thinks that the Germans have stood the test magnificently and compares certain isolated actions with the stand of Leonidas at Thermopylae.

General von Ardenne speaks of measures "of which it is not yet permitted to speak," and which will aid the Germans in resuming the initiative and recouping their losses. He does not believe that the offensive will end speedily.

GERMANY RECRUITS ALIENS.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Statements taken from German prisoners captured by the allied forces on the western front contain evidence that Germany has been impressing into her own military service not only Belgian civilians but also those of neutral nations. Extracts from two of these statements reached Washington today, showing that a Belgian civilian and a Swiss neutral had been so dealt with by Germany.

"These witnesses prove," concludes the dispatch, "that Germany does not hesitate to enroll neutrals by force into her armies, which shows both her contempt for the rights of peoples and the scarcity of her effectives."

WAGES RISE IN BRIDGEPORT.

Umpire's Ruling Affects 66 Plants Doing Government Work.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Wage increases to all workers now receiving less than 78 cents an hour in sixty-six munitions plants in Bridgeport, Conn., are provided in an award of Otto M. Eidlitz, umpire, chosen by the National War Labor Board. The decision affects about 50,000 workers.

The award establishes a minimum wage of 42 cents an hour for all male workers, skilled or unskilled, 21 years old or over, and a minimum of 32 cents an hour for all female workers, 18 years or over. It grants also the workers' demand for the basic eight-hour day in all the plants, establishes the right of workers to bargain collectively and to join trade unions, and provides that women performing the work of men shall receive the same pay.

SCHENECTADY, N. Y., Aug. 28.—Wage increases for the 4,000 office employes of the local plant of the General Electric Company were announced today to become effective at a date to be announced. Besides the present 10 per cent. bonus, which is to be considered as wages, an additional 10 per cent. will be paid. Employes who have been with the company more than five years will have 5 per cent. extra. Wages were increased recently among the shop workers at the plant.

CHARGE COST LIFE OF LIEUT. CRAWFORD

Former New York Newspaperman Was Slain When Americans Captured a Hill.

TWO BROTHERS IN SERVICE

LIEUT. CONRAD CRAWFORD, a former New York newspaper man, was killed in action after a charge with the men of Company B, 47th Infantry, up a hill in France. They took the hill, but at the crest their Lieutenant dropped with a machine gun bullet through his heart.

Crawford formerly was in the Wall Street Bureau of The Evening Sun. He was 24 years old and lived with his mother at 272 Hicks Street, Brooklyn, prior to entering the service. He served as a Corporal in the 7th New York on the border and won his commission in the regulars through the Madison Barracks Officers' Training Camp last year. He was born in Nyack, N. Y. At Commercial High School in Brooklyn Crawford was a football star. One brother, Captain Gilbert Crawford, is Adjutant of the 302d Engineers, 77th Division, while another is in command of a company of the 7th New York Guard.

LIEUT. WILLIAM J. DEEVY, not yet mentioned in the official lists, has been killed in action, according to official notification sent to his father, Jefferson Deevy of 109 West 129th Street. Lieutenant Deevy died on July 18, the day that Company A, 18th Infantry, began the drive on Château-Thierry. He was 31 years old and was a civil engineer. He was graduated at Manhattan College, Class of 1907. He attended the second Officers' Training School at Plattsburg and stood high in Company 10 at the close of the course. He had been overseas since January.

SERGEANT HARRY WOODRUFF, killed in action, was 26 years old, a Yale man, and lived with his mother, Mrs. Henry G. Woodruff, at Royal Farms, near Red Bank, N. J. He was a member of the 2d Pioneer Infantry, an organization built around the former 14th New York Infantry at Spartanburg, S. C. He had been in France less than a month when killed. Though the 2d was far back of the fighting zone, a stray German airplane eluded our patrols and bombed the camp, killing Woodruff. He was formerly employed in South America by the Braden Copper Company.

CECIL F. HUTTON, dead from wounds, was a member of the 105th Infantry, Empire Division, lived at 2,021 Arthur Avenue, the Bronx, and formerly was a stock broker's clerk at 100 Broadway. He was one of three sons of Mrs. Cecelia Hutton, inspector of gas masks at a Long Island City plant, who are in the service. Hutton died thirty minutes after he was wounded on July 28.

CORPORAL RICHARD HENRY VETTE, dead from wounds, was 25 years old, a member of Company F, 9th Infantry, and was wounded June 18, dying a month later. He lived with an aunt, Mrs. Emma Husman, at 402 Schenck Avenue, Brooklyn. He was graduated at Public School 64, and was a member of the Bedford Y. M. C. A. and St. John's Lutheran Church.

FRANK C. BROUGH, dead from wounds, was the son of Dr. Frank T. Brough of 150 East 127th Street. He joined the marines a year ago with three classmates from the Worcester Polytechnic, to which he had gone after his graduation at Amherst in 1914. Brough was the second of the three Worcester men to die in the national service.

THOMAS J. SHIEL, wounded, was a theatrical press agent, living at 77 West Ninety-fifth Street, when he enlisted in the 9th Infantry. Letters to friends announced that his wounds were slight and that he would soon be back in the line.

ANGELO PIEZZANO, severely wounded, was a member of Company K, 305th Infantry, when he was shot on July 16. His wife and three-month-old baby live at 427 East 114th Street.

DONATO BARTONE, severely wounded, was Italian born, a baker, lived at 833 Kent Avenue, Brooklyn, and had been six months in France with the 47th Infantry. He was wounded on July 18.

CORPORAL CHARLES SILVER, wounded, went to France from Camp Greene, N. C., with Company I, 47th Infantry. He is 23 years old, a shipping clerk, and lived with his mother at 322 East 144th Street, the Bronx.

CORPORAL MICHAEL CONNOLLY, listed as missing, is a captive with a nephew in a German prison camp. The War Department has notified Mrs. Patrick Slattery that Connolly and Martin J. Slattery are held in Camp Darmstadt. The Corporal was with Company F, 38th Infantry, while Slattery, who is not yet 18 years old, is with Company K, 165th Infantry.

SAMUEL SCHWARTZ, missing, is 21 years old, and was a member of the 106th Infantry, Empire Division. His mother, Mrs. Sarah Schwartz, of 1,152 Simpson Street, the Bronx, believes that her son was slightly wounded instead of missing in action, basing her conviction on letters he had written telling of being hit.

BRITISH LOSSES 14,484.

Casualties for Week Exceed Those of Previous Week by 6,073.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—British casualties reported in the week ended today totaled 14,484, compared with an aggregate of 8,411 reported in the previous week. The casualties are divided as follows:

Killed or died of wounds—Officers, 387; men, 2,194.

PERSHING COMMENDS OUR 1ST AND 3D CORPS

"You Have Justly Won the Eternal Gratitude of Our Countrymen," He Says.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 27—(Associated Press.)—General John J. Pershing, commander in chief of the American Army in France, has issued the following order:

"It fills me with pride to record in general orders a tribute to the service achievements of the 1st and 3d Corps, comprising the 1st, 2d, 3d, 4th, 26th, 28th, 32d, and 42d Divisions of the American Expeditionary Forces.

"You came to the battlefield at a crucial hour for the allied cause. For almost four years the most formidable army the world has yet seen had pressed its invasion of France and stood threatening its capital. At no time has that army been more powerful and menacing than when, on July 15, it struck again to destroy in one great battle the brave men opposed to it and to enforce its brutal will upon the world and civilization.

"Three days later, in conjunction with our allies, you counterattacked. The allied armies gained a brilliant victory that marks the turning point of the war. You did more than to give the Allies the support to which, as a nation, our faith was pledged. You proved that our altruism, our pacific spirit, and our sense of justice have not blunted our virility or our courage.

"You have shown that American initiative and energy are as fit for the tasks of war as for the pursuits of peace. You have justly won unstinted praise from our allies and the eternal gratitude of our countrymen.

"We have paid for our success with the lives of many of our brave comrades. We shall cherish their memory always and claim for our history and literature their bravery, achievement, and sacrifice.

"This order will be read to all organizations at the first assembly formations following its receipt.

"PERSHING."

ENLIST MANY OLDER MEN.

Those from 45 to 55 Succeed in Passing Army Test.

Recruiting under the amended War Department ruling permiting the enlistment of men between the ages of 45 and 55 years has begun briskly in this city. In two days nearly fifty men have applied for service at the recruiting office at Forty-second Street and Sixth Avenue, and a high percentage of the applicants have been accepted for duty and sent to Fort Slocum for preliminary training.

According to First Sergeant Sylvester, who enlists men of the prescribed ages for service in the staff departments, a gray haired man who gave his age as 73 tried to get into the service yesterday morning. Dispite his advanced age he was in remarkable good physical trim and appeared much disappointed when he was informed that regulations barred him.

BOMB TURK CAPITAL AGAIN.

Allied Airmen Make Second Raid in Week on Constantinople.

CONSTANTINOPLE, Aug. 27, (via London.)—An official communication issued today says:

> Enemy airmen again attacked Constantinople Sunday night. Our barrage prevented them from flying over the city, but some bombs were dropped in the suburbs. No damage was done.

A dispatch from Constantinople by way of Amsterdam, received Sunday, said that two hostile air squadrons had attacked Constantinople the previous Wednesday night.

LIEUT. FRANKLIN FOX KILLED

Former Newspaper Man Jumped from a Burning Airplane.

WITH THE AMERICAN ARMY IN FRANCE, Aug. 27—(Associated Press.)—Second Lieutenant Franklin Fox of Philadelphia, attached to headquarters staff, was killed on Friday afternoon when an airplane in which he was riding caught fire. The pilot, an experienced aviator, jumped and was killed.

Lieutenant Fox was a newspaper man until the United States entered the war. He was employed on The Boston Herald and The Philadelphia Public Ledger.

GERMANS APPLAUD WILSON.

Mannheim Meeting Cheers Statement of His War Aims.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—According to a French dispatch today, a German audience of 6,000 persons recently applauded the name of President Wilson at a public meeting organized by the syndicates of Mannheim to discuss the food situation.

U-BOAT RAMS BOATS; 38 LIVES ARE LOST

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Details of the sinking of the French steamer Lydiana off the coast of Spain on July 16 show that the crew of the German submarine deliberately murdered most of the 38 persons lost. There were only eight survivors out of the 46 of the crew and passengers on board.

The U-boat torpedoed the vessel without warning, killing several of the crew. While a boat was being lowered from the Lydiana a second torpedo struck the vessel. The boat was torn from its davits, but she kept her keel. Seeing this the submarine rammed her and cut her in two. The enemy then turned and rammed a second boat which had been launched successfully.

A young woman of 23, one of the passengers, was thrown high in the air by the impact and instantly killed. The Captain of the Lyndiana was killed in the same crash.

The Germans then endeavored to sink a raft carrying the remaining survivors. At first their efforts were without success. When one of the ship's officers left the raft to swim back to the sinking Lydiana the submarine turned and the officer was killed by its propellers.

After finally disposing of the Lydiana by shell fire, the U-boat made a sixth and successful attempt to ram the raft amid laughter from the U-boat's Captain and crew. The submarine then turned and disappeared toward the east. The eight survivors were picked up from the sea by patrol boats.

TRYING TO PLEASE SPAIN.

But Germany Has Not Yet Accepted U-Boat War Conditions.

PARIS, Aug. 28, (Havas.)—Germany has not yet accepted the conditions outlined by Spain with regard to submarine attacks on Spanish vessels, according to newspapers here. They believe that probably no definite agreement will be reached until after Germany attempts to complicate matters in the hope of saving het situation.

The Spanish Government, it is declared, will remain firm in its purpose to take German tonnage when a German submarine sinks a Spanish ship. The newspapers, however, note that the attitude of the German Foreign Office tends to be conciliatory.

Save Torpedoed Steamer.

Special to The New York Times.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 28.—The American tank steamship Frederic R. Kellogg, which was torpedoed on Tuesday, Aug. 13, off the New Jersey coast near Barnegat, has been salvaged. Sse was towed into port today by a wrecking tug and will go on to dry dock to be repaired.

PREDICTS GERMAN COUP IN RUSSIA

James Keeley Hears Kaiser Has Already Selected a Monarch for Late Czar's Throne.

CHAOS NOW AT ITS CLIMAX

Country This Winter Through Famine and Disease to be "World's Most Awful Graveyard."

James Keeley, former owner of The Chicago Herald, returning yesterday from Europe, where he has been investigating conditions under the auspices of the Committee on Public Information, declared that the starvation, misery and disorganization in Russia would lead Germany soon to attempt the installation of a German-picked monarch in that country.

Mr. Keeley predicted, however, that no German-made Czar would be able to avert the sufferings of hunger that are in store for the Russian people during the coming Winter, and that by next Spring the whole peasantry would turn willingly to the Allies for release from German rule, provided—and Mr. Keeley emphasized this condition—Siberia were under the control of an allied army and revealed a condition of order and comparative prosperity without famine and pestilence.

Mr. Keeley based his statement of conditions in Russia on information furnished to him, he said, by eminent Russians, one of whom he believes will be a potent factor in the regeneration of his distracted country.

"Unless signs and omens fail," he went on, "Germany is preparing to play what she hopes will be a trump card in Russia—and that in the near future. By that I mean the restoration of the monarchy with a Czar chosen in Wilhelmstrasse. The candidate for this dubious honor has been picked. He isn't the Kaiser's first or second choice, as the crown was indignantly rejected by several Grand Dukes. But his blood is royal even if his reputation is not."

Germany would find a strong backing for this project, Mr. Keeley said, in the church, to which the Russian peasants were now turning en masse for succor from the horrors brought on by the Bolsheviki.

"However," continued Mr. Keeley, "it is a question whether the devastation wrought by her intrigue in this section of the former Russian Empire is not so great as to be beyond cure. Life today is so appalling as compared with existence under Czardom that a return to ancient conditions would seem an Elysium to the ignorant peasantry. Under royal rule they had a certain amount of comfort and physical security, even if circled with needless restrictions and privations. To the 'uneducated masses,' to quote one of my informants, 'only one conclusion is indicated—a return to Czardom as an escape from their present miseries,' and as a promise at least of the safeguards and relative ease enjoyed prior to the downfall of the monarchy.

"This is what Germany is betting on, but the thoroughness of her work of devastation may render her calculations in vain.

Famine an Actuality.

"European Russia, this coming Winter, will, yes, must be, the world's most awful graveyard. Famine isn't a possibility. It is a certainty, today an actuality. Pestilence is reaping the first crop of a gigantic harvest. According to my information from a quarter to one-third of the inhabitants must die before next Summer. There is neither work nor food to support the population, and today the working people are simply predestined victims of hunger and disease. Productive labor has been annihilated and no nation can live without it.

"All financial system has vanished. Debts have been repudiated, banks abolished, and the gold reserve of the nation largely stolen. The printing press is the monetary right arm of the Bolshevist Government. Three months ago the Trotzkyites had turned out 28,000,000,000 rubles of the old pattern notes. The postal service having gone to the scrap heap, communities finding it difficult to secure supplies of this fiat currency took to manufacturing their own notes, which are not accepted outside their own districts or towns. Travelers, should there be such hardy individuals in Russia at the present time, would have to pay the cost of exchanging these notes as they passed from place to place and at a rate of from one-half to two-thirds their face value.

Financial Values Gone.

	Pre-war.	1917.	Today.
Daily wage of a workman in roubles.	1 to 1½	7½ to 15	125 to 150
Cost of a pood of wheat (36.1 lbs.)	1.2 to 1.5	6 to 8	*300 to 800

*According to locality.

"Railroad and inland water travel almost is a thing of the past. Fuel is the crux of this situation. The available supply has disappeared. The unburned oil fields are not working, and the Bolshevist mind conceiving the idea that the plutocrats could not create wealth without coal, flooded the mines. Administrative staffs of railroads also were creatures of the money devil, so they were dismissed. As a result, rolling stock and tracks are rapidly going to pot. Some few railroads are operating but as private concerns in the hands of enterprising bandits. Each station has its own tariff for passengers and freight, payable in the currency of that particular place. Even if a journey is begun there is no certainty it will end without additional exactions, as the train crews frequently do a little bit of highway robbery by threatening to stop the train in some desolate spot unless large ransoms are paid.

Manufacturing at a Standstill.

"Manufacturing is at a standstill, nine-tenths of the factories having been shut down. Many are heaps of ruins, because they were the property of the 'criminal bourgeois.' Cotton fabricating practically is a memory, for this reason: It was the custom in Russia for banks to buy and hold cotton for their patrons. So, the leaders of the New Ideal, believing the cotton belonged to the money devil, struck a blow at capitalism by burning all the cotton they could get their hands on.

"Only 20 per cent. of the tillable lands of European Russia were put into crops this year. As far back as the Spring of 1917 the teachings of the Social Revolutionists led to the burning and destruction of many of the large agricultural estates. Live stock and implements were appropriated. Equitable division of the loot often caused trouble. A just allotment seldom could be arrived at, so resort was had to breaking up and dividing the articles and animals. Thus if there happened to be only one cow for four individuals it was cut into four pieces. A childlike son of the new freedom went home perfectly happy with two wheels from a reaper.

"Commerce, even from the standpoint of 1917, does not exist. All the big firms have suspended because of the lack of coal, the impossibility of getting raw material, and because their factories have been destroyed. Retail dealers have vanished for the simple reason that their stocks were confiscated and they cannot get any more. Such commerce as exists is in the hands of acquisitive soldiers who have stolen goods and army transport trucks. These peripatetic merchants travel the land, buying at forced sales or stealing when the latter seems more desirable.

"So thoroughly have the people of Russia in their blind ignorance destroyed their country that they have deprived themselves of the means of rising again when their minds shall have turned from their folly.

"These are the conditions a German-made Czar must face. If he were the most benevolent and all-powerful individual in the world he could not change the inevitable.

"Now, suppose early next Summer the survivors look to the east and see a Siberia, under allied control, that is comparatively prosperous; a Siberia without famine and pestilence; a Siberia in which order has been restored; a Siberia in which factories are operating; a Siberia with security for life and property; a Siberia through which an allied army has marched, and which is at the doors of European Russia.

"What is a fair assumption as to the course the people of Russia will take?"

EPIDEMICS SWEEP RUSSIA.

Officers Arriving Here En Route to Siberia Tell of Conditions.

AN ATLANTIC PORT, Aug. 28.—Among the 250 passengers who arrived today from England on a British liner were twelve Russian officers who are going to Eastern Siberia via Vancouver to join the loyal Russian Army that is being collected there to march against the Bolsheviki. These officers said they had been in the war from the commencement in 1914 on the eastern frontier, and had not seen their families for four years and did not know what had become of them, whether the members were alive or dead.

One of the party, a Major, said that the intervention of the Entente Allies to save Russia from becoming a vassal of Germany would be successful, but in his opinion the United States would have to send an army of 100,000 men. The brutal methods of the Bolsheviki in shooting down citizens in the streets without any pretext and the looting of cities by their guards and general oppression of the people were causing those who had been friendly toward Germany to change their opinions in favor of the Allies more and more every day.

"Cholera," he said, "is raging all over the country unchecked. There are other diseases, too, such as typhus and smallpox, and the people die from them in the streets unattended and also from starvation. Prompt military aid and the appointment of a strong military dictator for the duration of the war are the only sure remedies that can save Russia from the Huns and restore order from chaos."

There were also some British officers on board the ship on their way to join the allied expeditionary force in Vladivostok.

NEW RUSSO-GERMAN TREATIES

Three Supplementary to That of Brest-Litovsk Signed in Berlin.

COPENHAGEN, Aug. 28.—German and Russian plenipotentiaries Tuesday, according to an official telegram from Berlin, signed three treaties supplementary to the Brest-Litovsk treaty. They include a treaty supplementing the treaty of peace, as well as a financial agreement and one dealing with the civil law.

The treaties, which are the result of negotiations which have been going on in Berlin for several weeks between the Germans and the Russians, were signed at the Ministry of Foreign Affairs.

FEDERAL FUND TO AID PLANTS' CONVERSION

Financial Corporation's Help to Less Essential Industries May Be Extended.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Government financial aid was available under certain conditions to industries in the process of conversion from less essential production to manufacture of materials contributing to prosecution of the war, officials of the War Finance Corporation today explained. This was prompted by reports that many manufacturing concerns were threatened with bankruptcy or entire suspension during the war because they had insufficient funds to permit changes in their plants or processes necessary to transform them into essential industries.

The principal conditions for obtaining aid from the Government's half billion dollar fund established to tide war industries over critical periods are that the concern must be engaged in industry or business essential during the war period and that its credit must be of a nature to provide adequate collateral for the loan.

Bernard M. Baruch, Chairman of the War Industries Board, announced today that curtailments of less-essential industries would become increasingly stringent as the war progressed, and that consequently the question of Government financial aid for industries under conversion promised to take on added importance. He indicated he was anxious, however, to minimize the difficulty for these industries and to prevent their wrecking or suspension for the war, and for this reason he has taken the question to Mr. Harding.

MAURICE EXPECTS COLLAPSE OF FOE

There is little doubt but that the turn of the tide dates from General Gouraud's repulse of the Crown Prince's Champagne attack. Fifteen of the best German divisions, carefully nursed and trained for the great event, were literally smashed; and this so weakened the Crown Prince as to give Foch his chance. How he used it, how he has never let go of the Germans from the moment when they first began to yield, how he has completely regained the initiative and exhausted the enemy's reserve and forced him steadily back, we have all seen and are seeing daily. It is certainly one of the great masterpieces of generalship.

With the initiative in our hands, the enemy's weak points became apparent. His policy of selecting his best physically and mentally for his storm troops made him powerful in attack, but enfeebled his defense. Picked men, carefully nursed and trained behind the lines and given special privileges, displayed a high degree of enterprise and initiative; and to them Germany owes to a great extent her successes at the beginning of the war. They bored holes, through which the masses in their rear poured; but being in the forefront of battle, their losses were very heavy, and when they had gone, the general level of fighting power of the Germans was much reduced.

It is, I believe, to that fact that the sudden change which we have witnessed in the German Army from strength to weakness is mainly due. When a corps élite is formed at the expense of the whole of the army, the tendency is to lower the morale of those who do not belong to the favored body. German divisions thought to be good enough to hold the line defensively have lost their old pride in themselves under the deadening influence of trench warfare, and as soon as things began to go wrong they cracked. We have had numerous orders recently in our hands signed by Ludendorff and other German Generals, adverting in strong language to the weakening of discipline among their troops; slackness in dress, slackness in saluting, looting of supply trains and stores, of neglect of duty in holding positions, and attempts to smuggle arms into Germany have all been commented on severely by the supreme command; and all this shows that the rigid Prussian discipline is not standing the strain of war.

Germans Poorly Intrenched.

Other and more convincing signs of the decadence of the Germany Army are to be found on the battlefields. Prisoners are being taken more easily than ever before. During my week in France over 30,000 prisoners had been captured by a series of admirably contrived local operations, and it has frequently happened that the number of Germans sent back to cages has exceeded the total casualties of our men in the engagement. The time was when we were pleased when a week of fierce fighting yielded us such captures at five times the cost. There is no doubt but that parts of the German Army—not the whole, but parts—are fighting soft.

Another strong indication that the enemy's standard of discipline has declined is to be found in the state of his defenses. The contrast between the enemy's lines south of the Somme, which Sir Henry Rawlinson overran on Aug. 8, and our own trenches opposite to them is very remarkable. Though the Germans had been on the ground for more than three months of Summer weather, they had prepared no defensive system at all comparable with those which in time past they used to throw up with such astonishing rapidity. They were content with a single front trench without support lines and without communication trenches. This indicates either great slackness or great scarcity of labor. We used to contrast the enemy's powers of digging very unfavorably with our own, but never during the worst times of the Winter of 1914-1915, in Flanders, with the soil of the consistency of pea soup, were our defenses so inadequate as those with which the enemy was content on the Villers-Bretonneux front.

Reserves Running Short.

We know that the Germans have had to reduce the number and size of their divisions. They have, in fact, been forced to begin living on their man-power capital; and that process, once begun, must continue for the time being. Their reserves have been reduced to a number barely adequate for defense, and they have been compelled to swallow their pride and appeal to Austria for help. They are moving their reserves about and mixing up their formations in a manner which betrays extreme nervousness; and altogether one has an impression of weakness in the enemy's ranks greater than at any other period of the war.

I do not wish to convey the impression that the German armies in the west are within measurable distance of collapse. I have seen a large number of prisoners recently taken, and their physique is distinctly good—every bit as good on the average as that of our own men. They appear to have been well fed, and their boots, clothing, and equipment are all excellent.

Owing to the lack of rubber, the German gas mask is inferior, but that is the only important defect in the outfit of the enemy. He is very short of cotton and jute and has been forced to introduce sandbags, web equipment, and machine gun belts made of paper fibre. But these articles serve their purpose, and, provided he can turn them out in sufficient quantities to make up for the great wastage, he should not suffer.

He has not yet put in his 1920 class; and when it does appear in the ranks it will have had much more training than our boys had this year. It is now certain that a month ago we overestimated the enemy's power and that he underestimated the power of the Allies. Of the two mistakes, the former is much the less deadly; but we must not be carried away by the great successes which we are now winning. The military map is still very much in the enemy's favor. Our own troops and the French have had a hard year, while the American forces are far from fully developed. The enemy is still formidable, and we have not yet the superiority of force necessary to crush him.

But it is quite certain that his military power is on the decline; and if we play our cards properly we can in good time turn this decline into a collapse.

turn to the Russian ranks those who are fighting with the enemy."

Poles in Army on Murman Coast.

Special to The New York Times.

DETROIT, Aug. 28.—Romon Dmowski, President of the Polish National Committee at Paris, who arrived in the United States two days ago, revealed in a speech today at the All Polish Convention being held here, that a Polish force is operating with the Allies on the Murman coast. He also said that to the Polish Army in France had been given the wonderful distinction in the last series of engagements of bearing a noble part of the burden of saving Paris.

PEKING, Aug. 23.—Today saw an improved outlook in Siberia. General Semenoff, assisted by Czech reinforcements, has resumed the offensive, driving the Bolsheviki from the Matsievski station, westward of Manchuli, and capturing prisoners.

The Japanese are fighting at Dauria.

Reds Give Up in Archangel Province.

ARCHANGEL, Aug. 27, (Associated Press.)—With the voluntary surrender of the town of Shenkursk, on the Waga River, south of Archangel, to the representatives of the new Government, the last town of any size in the government of Archangel passed out of the hands of the Bolsheviki.

The reception accorded the allied troops at one of the more important villages in the province was typical. Here the village elders, garbed in peasant costume, met the troops on the road with a platter of bread and salt, the symbol of welcome. The people gave their best houses for billets and hailed the soldiers as the saviors of Russia. Previous to this, they had blocked and guarded the road against the retreating Bolsheviki.

An official statement issued here says that the allied forces have engaged the Bolshevist Red Guards and have dispersed the Bolshevist river flotilla.

The communication tells in detail of the fighting since Aug. 11, and reports that all the encounters were generally successful for the Russo-allied troops. There was considerable fighting on the River Dvina, which empties into the Gulf of Archangel. One Bolshevist craft was captured and the others fled, after some of them had been damaged.

A thanksgiving service was held here for the disappearance of the Bolsheviki from Archangel and for the victories of the Entente allied forces on the western front. Russian and allied troops paraded the streets.

The people in the villages along the southern shore of the White Sea are starving. The distress is spreading. The inhabitants are begging the Entente Allies to assist them.

AMSTERDAM, Aug. 27.—The allied occupation of Kotlas, on the Dvina River, southeast of Archangel, which is reported to the German papers by way of Vardoe and Christiania, is regarded by them as important, as it shows that two-thirds of the distance from Archangel to Viatka apparently has been covered by the Entente forces. In addition, Kotlas is connected by a branch railway line with Viatka, which is a halfway station between Vologda and Perm, on the Great North Russian trunk line.

The Cologne Zeitung points out that the Entente plan to effect a junction with the Czechoslovaks at Ekaterinburg (175 miles southeast of Perm) is a good deal nearer realization. It professes inability to understand how Kotlas was occupied, as the last official information from the Soviet Government made it appear that all was going well for the Bolsheviki in that region.

THREAT TO DESTROY OIL WELLS OF BAKU

Tchitcherin Says Reds There Will Act if Turks Force Town to Surrender.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—Arthur Ransome, who describes events in Russia from the Bolshevist point of view, telegraphs to The London Daily News from Stockholm under date of Aug. 26 and 27:

"With regard to Tchitcherin's bitter protest to the Germans against allowing the Turks to break the guarantees given by Germany, which they are doing by their continued advance on Baku, it should be remembered not only that the Armenians but the whole world have much at stake there.

"Tchitcherin speaks of a possible catastrophe if Shevket Pasha, who is urging the Mohammedans in Baku to seize the town and is himself advancing with that object, should make the fall of Baku inevitable. This would mean that there would not only be a massacre of Armenians on an enormous scale, but also the loss to the world of the Baku oil wells.

"The Soviet defenders of Baku intend to destroy the oil wells if they are forced to surrender. The Germans, knowing this, some time ago made an ingenious attempt to obtain the oil wells by diplomatic means, sending two German experts on a flying machine to Baku with power to enter into a treaty with the Baku public. The Baku Soviet arrested both, and sent them by roundabouts ways to Moscow, saying that all negotiations with foreign powers must go through that centre. I saw them there myself when they were released from the headquarters of the committee organized for the counter-revolution to which, by misapprehension, they had been delivered.

"The deputation, probably German-organized, which went from far Karelia to Finland to offer its country to the Finns, found itself extremely unpopular on returning home. One of its members was killed, and the others had to leave their houses. The Olonetz frontier is guarded by Red frontier guards, and any attempts at accepting the offers of the local bourgeoisie will be resisted.

"The Karelian-Finnish offer is a mere repetition of history, which is already dull with the repetition of the bourgeoisie groups, first in the Ukraine, then in the Don district, and then in the Caucasus, offering their country as a whole to a foreign power, with a view to saving their own position from a majority of the restless mass beneath them.

"Owing to indifferentism, and to the discontent against the existing Governments, invaders, coming in answer to such invitations, find the way easy at first. Only afterward do they find their welcome easy to outstay. The Ukraine, of course, is the first example, nor can the opposition of the population be put down exclusively to the requisitions by the Germans, since in the Urals, where the Czechs and counter-revolutionaries at first found things easy and the population almost ready to support them, they now are finding their position threatened as much from the upheavals within as by military pressure from without. They have now been in possession long enough for the population to turn against them.

"So far, in every district of Russia where attempts have been made, the population does turn against any who try to restore the ascendency of the bourgeoisie. The Czechs, who are not themselves counter-revolutionaries, are now suffering for the deeds of those who profited by their presence to seize the power, and succeeded in demonstrating that a counter-revolution cannot be arrested half way and that coalitions with the bourgeoisie tend swiftly so far to the right as to recreate a revolutionary movement beneath them.

"Meanwhile, by the suppression of the officers' plot, which was the most serious attempt yet prepared at the counter-revolution from within, the Soviet has strengthened itself, even at the moment when the feet of its best troops are in the capitals, since the Soviet republic is being compelled to use its half-formed army to defend itself on three sides, while guarding a fourth.

"As I close this telegram, I learn from a fairly reliable source that the split anticipated has taken place among the leaders of the Red Finns, and that Tokoi disagrees with Sirola as to the attitude to be taken by the Red Finns. I am told that Tokoi is at Murman, persuading the Red Finns to remain with the Allies, whereas a committee of the Finnish Social Democratic Party has declared they will be traitors if they assist the Allies against the Soviet republic."

THEATRICAL NOTES.

Stuart Walker's newest play, "Jonathan Makes a Wish," will begin an engagement at the Princess Theatre on Monday night, Sept. 9. In the cast will be Gregory Kelly, Margaret Mower, Beatrice Maude, Elizabeth Patterson, Elizabeth Black, Edgar Stehli, Ainsworth Arnold, Joseph Graham, and John Talbott.

The Orpheum, Colonial, and Alhambra vaudeville theatres will reopen for the season next Monday afternoon.

Phoebe Foster will be Thomas A. Wise's leading woman in "Mr. Barnum," coming to the Criterion.

Bertha Kalich yesterday began rehearsals in "The Riddle Woman," a drama by Charlotte E. Wells and Dorothy Donnelly. The piece will be seen in New York in October.

The "Follies" will end its run at the New Amsterdam Theatre on Saturday night, Sept. 14.

DE HAVILANDS NOW MADE IN QUANTITY

military value, we are not going to produce it."

While the Bristol fighter has been abandoned those responsible for the aircraft production program are continuing the manufacture of De Haviland-4s, but trying to improve them and meet the criticisms that were made by General Pershing in his cablegram of June 14 last.

"We are making a good many De Haviland-4s," said Mr. Ryan. "There has been a good deal of criticism of them and there have been a good many changes made on them recently. These changes have not been discovered in the way that is generally supposed. I mean the so-called defects that result in changes are not in many cases what you can really call defects at all, but improvements in workmanship, and they are going all the time. Men are learning to do these things better all the time. Improvements may be developed in one country or another on different kinds of planes but as they are developed they are incorporated in every machine that can carry them.

"The De Havilands are being built now in about the same quantity as before the change was made. It is not a totally different machine, it is just an improved machine, and we think in a few months it will be improved further.

"On account of the cancellation of the Bristol because it was an unsafe machine, it left us for the time being a limited program as far as manufacturing was concerned, because we were developing other types that had not been brought to the point of production."

It was at this point that Mr. Ryan spoke of the experimentation now in progress in an effort to find types of planes that might be placed in quantity production, if found successful.

"In the last two weeks," Mr. Ryan said, "as a result of these months of investigation and study and design, we have flown in tests at Dayton at least four machines that are new as far as our manufacture is concerned in this country.

"We have flown the S. E-5, which is a British machine, a single-seated fighter. Samples of it have been brought over from England, copies have been made in this country, and with our engines in them they have been flown and are now being tested. In a few days we will decide whether that machine will go into quantity production or not.

"The exact copy of the English Bristol with an engine of about the same power that they use in it in England has been brought over here, copies have been made, machines have been built, and they are being flown.

"Another machine now being tested was designed in Detroit by Captain Lepere, a French officer, who was brought over here to design machines equipped with Liberty engines. Three different machines of that type have been flown and are very promising.

"There are at least two other types of machine that are being flown that we do not think it advisable to give publicity to because they are not so far along that we feel satisfied that they are going through. We do not want to say that we have five types and come out with only three. These are all machines that can be made in quantity, and of course it will take some little time to get them into production, but the work of design has been going on. Now we are using, contrary to the general supposition, many American designers of reputation.

"Within a week the Pomilio Brothers, an Italian family of airplane designers, have come to this country. They have a number of very effective types of machines in use in the Italian army. They were very successful designers and builders of airplanes in Italy, but they sold their business to the Anseldos the big munitions people in Italy, and they have come over here. They have come to the United States to design planes to fit our engines and are established in Indianapolis and are at work. They brought about thirty designers and workmen with them.

"This is just to give you a general idea of the scope of preparation that is being made to put us in production on planes that will fit our engines. The types of planes that we are building are fixed by the engines that we are going to build, for, after all, engines are the limiting factor.

"We have increased the orders for Liberty motors from 22,500, when this bureau was formed, to approximately 50,000—that is the Liberty '12.' We have ordered a large number of Liberty '8s' which were developed and set aside temporarily for the '12s' when the larger and more powerful engine was decided upon. We have contracted for some of the very best foreign engines, such as the Hispano-Suiza motor. We are going into quite a large production at some of the best engine building shops in America with that engine. Our engine program is a large one. We are giving every inducement to engine builders who are at work on these things, and they have to be selected carefully because it is not every engine builder, no matter how successful he has been, who can build a high-powered aeronautical engine.

"We are not afraid of what we can accomplish, but we are not going to make any promises or predictions."

When Mr. Ryan was asked whether the eight-cylinder motor had been perfected he replied: "There are a number of Liberty 8s in production."

It was suggested to Mr. Ryan that the Allies had not enough planes on the front, and he was asked whether our production was doing anything to meet that need.

"I would not say," replied Mr. Ryan, "that we are meeting the need on the front because the need there has never been met, not only as far as the American Army is concerned, but it has never been met as far as any army is concerned."

"Are airplanes going across in large quantities?" he was asked.

"Planes," replied Mr. Ryan, "are going across in fair quantities now; not in many types, but we are supplying engines for planes that are being built in both England and France, and in that way obtaining just that many planes for our own army and in considerable numbers.

"Every one of our allies is calling for Liberty engines, and demanding them, finding it impossible to meet their own production of planes with engines for them. They are all relying on our production of Liberty engines; not for a few engines, but for a large part of their program."

SAYS RUMELY PLANNED TO FEED THE GERMANS

Stenographer Employed by Him Tells of Scheme to Create Big Merchant Fleet.

Dr. Edward A. Rumely, who is awaiting trial on the charge of falsely concealing in an affidavit the fact that the German Government owned The Evening Mail while he pretended to be its proprietor, drew up a plan for creating a German-controlled merchant fleet to send food to Germany through neutrals, according to the testimony of Miss Elizabeth M. Rosenberg, who was employed as a stenographer by the German University League and Dr. Rumely in 1916. Dr. Rumely's alleged scheme was drafted for submission to German authorities in this country at a time when a large number of Germans and pro-Germans were competing for favor with German officials by originating plans to exploit the United States for the benefit of Germany.

Miss Rosenberg testified that Dr. Rumely called her to take dictation from him in November, 1916, on a matter which he described as "very, very private." Before beginning to dictate he stipulated, she said, that she should turn over to him her original stenographic notes and all copies, which she made from them. Miss Rosenberg called at Dr. Rumely's home at 103d Street and Riverside Drive to do the work.

There Dr. Rumely dictated at considerable length, she said, a project by which the German Government might invest and interest capital in obtaining the control of neutral vessels to carry food and supplies from this country to neutral countries adjoining Germany. American citizens, including both pro-Germans and others induced to believe that it was a good proposition were to become owners or charterers of a fleet of ships which were then rendering service to the Allies. The project was to strike at the Allies in two ways. First, the cargoes would go to Germany, it was planned, by devices intended to trick the British blockade. Second, the ships themselves would be a loss to the Allies by being taken away from the allied trade.

HORVATH'S ATTEMPTED COUP D'ETAT.

General HORVATH, the anti-Bolshevist leader whose attempt to seize the supreme control of Russian military forces in the Far East is now happily reported to have been a complete failure, may be the man of the hour, but there is no indication as yet that the hour needs a man. There is at Vladivostok a fairly well organized Government representing the anti-Bolshevist parties, and another at Omsk; and these two Governments, which had reached a working agreement not long ago, were reported to be nonplused by HORVATH's action. Their surprise must have been shared by the representatives of the Allies. We did not go into Russia to facilitate the assumption of power behind our lines by military dictators, no matter how excellent their motives or how impressive their qualifications.

Allied forces are in Russia for the purpose of driving out the Germans and the Bolsheviki who are co-operating with them, in order to remove the menace to the allied cause which would be provided by a Russia dominated by Germany, and incidentally to aid the Russians in setting up a workable Government representing the people. Neither of these ends would have been served by HORVATH's action. The work of clearing the Germans and their friends out of the Far East will have to be done in the main by the Czechoslovaks and the Japanese, and among the Russian forces which will co-operate HORVATH's seizure of power was likely to do as much harm as good. From the moral standpoint the objections are even greater. The presence of the allied armies creates a sort of party truce among the Russian factions, and it is in the highest degree undesirable that any one of these factions should take advantage of the desire of the Allies to preserve order by confronting them with a fait accompli which may be wholly in contradiction to the desires of the Russians.

Dr. HAROLD WILLIAMS, who knows more about Russia than most foreigners and who sympathizes with the liberal and democratic elements most congenial to the Allies, has warned us of the danger of committing ourselves to the support of any political party in Russia. The future Government of Russia is something to be worked out by the Russians themselves, and the organ for this working out is the Constituent Assembly, elected by popular vote last Fall and dispersed by the Bolsheviki. The Government of anti-Bolshevist Russians about Archangel demands the convocation of this body, which from the point of view of law as well as of democratic theory can properly claim more than any other instrumentality to represent Russia. That the Social Revolutionists had a majority in that Assembly is incidental; the whole theory of representative government lies in giving your support to a duly elected body, whether your party won the elections or not. It may yet turn out, though we hope not, that a certain amount of arbitrary rule, here or there, may be needed in Russia; but neither HORVATH nor anybody else ought to be allowed to use the presence of allied troops as a shield for a usurpation which in form at least is not better than that of LENINE and TROTZKY.

OLLIE M. JAMES.

If OLLIE M. JAMES ever grew restive under the constant coupling of his name with the explanation, "the biggest man in the Senate," as if his size were the most notable thing about him, nobody ever knew it. The implication was undeserved, but Senator JAMES was not thin-skinned; he was the most good-natured of men, and took what came to him just as wholeheartedly as he gave others what he thought they deserved. He had no antipathy to "Yankees;" he liked them. His first chum in Congress was Big TIM SULLIVAN of New York and his last was "BILLY" HUGHES of New Jersey. Yet he was a Southerner through and through, and viewed everything—except the personality of individual Yankees—through unreconstructed spectacles.

As a speechmaker he was distinctly Southern, and because this fashion of oratory has passed out in other States there has been a tendency to speak lightly of it. It was good enough for DANIEL WEBSTER, though; and we have never been able to see anything to jeer at when it was used by a man who knew how to use it. The artificial constriction of phraseology into the "business" style may be as much a pose as the "oratorical" style, as SHAKESPEARE strongly hinted in the case of Mark Antony. However that may be, OLLIE JAMES was a master of this flowery style; and he had the taste and tact necessary to prevent it from running into bathos. Old-fashioned it may be, but in the single case of OLLIE JAMES we defy any man to say that he ever listened to a speech all the way through and never got a single thrill out of it.

And JAMES did not owe his triumphs to his oratory. He owed them to steady work and to the impression he made on others that he was a man of ability. It was the skill with which he conducted the Goebel case that sent him to Congress; it was his ability, both political and legislative, that promoted him to the Senate. He was a thorough friend, a terrible fighter, and in all things square.

BLEASE.

Mr. COLE L. BLEASE has been badly beaten in the South Carolina Democratic primaries. The United States Senate, soon to be rid of Mr. VARDAMAN of Mississippi, is not to have the spokesman of Palmetto hillbillyism thrust upon it. Mr. VARDAMAN is a vehement person, but he is an Edward Everett, a mirror of academic propriety, compared with the South Carolinian.

Of the choice and patriotic language used by Mr. BLEASE and his Charleston newspaper champion in regard to the war, it will be unnecessary to give any more specimens. Their manner of "supporting" the war is well understood in South Carolina. Mr. DIAL, a thoroughly loyal man and representative of the State, will be Mr. TILLMAN's successor for the long term. A great day's work for South Carolina, for the Senate, for the United States. Doubtless Mr. BLEASE will continue to play upon invincible ignorance, but he will be only a local political nuisance.

DRAFTING MR. FORD.

To Mr. HENRY FORD has been given the Democratic primary nomination for a Senator in Congress from Michigan; and in the Republican primaries he got a considerable vote, whether Democratic or Republican we have no means of knowing. Commander TRUMAN H. NEWBERRY, sometime Secretary of the Navy, got the Republican nomination, Mr. CHASE S. OSBORN, the old Progressive Republican who was Governor from 1911 to 1913, running third.

The primary vote was comparatively light. This is not accounted for entirely by the absence of many soldiers and sailors. In 1916 a spirit of carelessness, of cynicism, or of bad joking raged in Michigan. HENRY FORD, as a Republican candidate for President, was the brilliant Wolverine jest of 1916. He is continued a joke, made earnest by the laying on him of Presidential hands.

There are so many unhappy records of public men as to the war that the forgiving may pass the sponge of amnesty, if they choose, over Mr. FORD's ultramarine adventures, his artless pacifism, his strange advertised ideas or misconceptions, his singular sentiments about the flag. The bottomless depth of his political ignorance, of his innocence of even the rudiments of a knowledge of the institutions and recorded experience of his own country or any other have been noted. He may be regarded as an innocent in politics. It is the genius who has put "the common people" into chariots of swiftness that has won fame and admiration and nomination.

Accepting this theory, admitting in his case the Lincolnian apothegm that for the people who want that kind of Senator that is the kind of Senator they want, what shall be said of his attitude, be it innocence or affectation, toward the great office which it is proposed to foist upon him? Is it reality or is it pose, equally improper in either case, his profession or confession of total want of interest in or desire for the post? The man who thinks he voted for GARFIELD in 1884 didn't know when the Michigan primaries were to be held in 1918. A total abstainer from political thought, knowledge, interest, activity. It has not been customary to reward such citizens, however amiable their characters and fat their bank accounts, with high offices of state.

Hear Mr. FORD's flippant and scornful answer to the question as to what he would do if he got both the Democratic and the Republican nomination:

> I would pitch a penny to decide which nomination I would accept, or leave it to my secretary to decide. I would give a million dollars to be out of the matter, and I would not have been in it but for President WILSON's request.

That is a sufficient, a fatal argument against Mr. FORD. It would be no improper bargain, and a great gain to philanthropy, to politics, and to the Senate, if Mr. FORD gave a million dollars to the Red Cross and Mr. WILSON exempted him from the draft for Senator.

HENRY FORD appeals to the romantic element in the community. He was poor. He is become incredibly rich. He has got millions of dollars by putting millions of people on wheels. And he has a wage system of his own. So nothing is too good for him, and, unwilling, unfitted, he must be dragged into the Senate. We wonder what Mr. GEORGE F. EDMUNDS and Mr. ELIHU ROOT think of conscription to the Senate.

BANKERS AND THE DRAFT.

No plea can be made for any class exemption under the draft, and no class would ask privilege for itself. But there are cases of particular hardship from a public rather than a class or personal point of view. There is more than one banking institution in New York in which the officers are subject to draft, with but one or two exceptions. Their cases come before draft boards in other communities, which are moved by considerations affecting Connecticut or New Jersey and which are naturally more intent on filling their quotas than on giving exemption on either public or private grounds. The same consideration is true regarding brokers and bankers generally, but the disorganizing effect would be less in private businesses, although severe for all financial institutions.

No doubt many of these men will fall into deferred classes, but few of them can urge the dependency of their families, for it is understood that exemption will be refused where the family commands a capital of $5,000. The public aspect of the matter is that so many of these men were indispensable to the floating of the Third Liberty Loan, and will be badly missed in connection with the Fourth Liberty Loan, now so near. Substitutes for this service, as well as for maintaining the stability of the commercial and security markets, can be found with difficulty, if at all, for it is a singular fact that these duties fall on younger men here than elsewhere. Even in England, where conditions are most like our own, bankers sent to the front were found less useful there than in their line of duty at their desks, and the financiers were sent back again, as the miners were.

It was necessary to do this, for banking is not a business where it is possible to substitute women or casual men. The money professions have not been backward in volunteering their services, rather the contrary, and more are eager to go before the finish comes. The public question is whether they are more useful with a rifle or at their desks. That is best decided in individual cases by looking backward to see what they have done for the public welfare in winning the war that makes it judicious to keep them at the same line of work instead of sending them to fight.

THE WEBB LAW MISJUDGED.

There is a curious misunderstanding in Argentina about the purpose and intended effect of our new Webb law, which permits exporting manufacturers to use co-operative associations in foreign trade. The statute is attacked and denounced by the press there as legislation hostile to the interests of Argentine consumers. "South American markets," says La Epoca, the Government newspaper at Buenos Aires, "will be left to fight as best "they can against the same commer-"cial practices which are prohibited "in the United States." It expresses a hope that after the war the effect of the law will be counterbalanced by the competition of other nations.

The co-operation permitted by the Webb law will really be beneficial to buyers and consumers in the southern countries. Harmful combination practices made unlawful here are not allowed by the statute to be used in foreign trade. Argentine newspapers have in mind the prices of our products. The effect of Webb law co-operation will be to reduce these by lowering the cost of export transactions, because expenses will be borne by each exporting industry as a whole, and each manufacturer will not be required to maintain a separate agency for his business. This reduction of expenses and selling prices will enable an exporting industry to compete more effectively with European export combinations, of which Germany's cartels and syndicates, approved and aided by the Government, were the leading examples before the war. And competition tends to lower the cost to consumers, not to increase it.

These critics in South America should know that every co-operative association formed in accordance with the new law's provisions will be under the constant supervision of the same official authorities that enforce laws against objectionable combination practices in this country. All of them will be watched and held responsible by the Federal Trade Commission and the Bureau of Domestic and Foreign Commerce. They are required to submit reports as to organization and the methods used under authority of the statute, and are exposed to restraint and punishment if their methods in foreign markets are unjust. The Argentine press may be sure that attention will be given promptly to any complaints that may be made. We desire to retain after the war the great increase of our trade with South America, and the conduct of exporters will not be allowed to excite the opposition of consumers there. The new law is a good one, designed to serve the interests of both the exporter and the foreign buyer.

SONNINO LOOKS BACKWARD.

The arrangement concluded semi-officially last Spring between Italy and the Jugoslavs was one of the high-water marks of allied diplomacy in this war. It was the working out in a concrete instance of the ideals of democracy and international justice for which the Allies are fighting; it was a practical illustration of the possibility of harmonizing conflicting national aspirations on the principles of justice. Is Italy going to stick to it?

Every one thought she was, at the time; Premier ORLANDO meant it, and the Liberal members of his Cabinet backed him up. Professor NITTI, Minister of Finance, expressly stated to THE NEW YORK TIMES correspondent in Paris a few weeks ago that Italy meant what she said. But Baron SONNINO, the Italian Foreign Minister, apparently does not mean it. The Giornale d'Italia, a newspaper which is generally regarded as SONNINO's mouthpiece, said a few days ago: "Italy will have no renunciations. "The Jugoslavs have understood that "territorial questions should not be "raised." But the agreement made at Rome in April, sanctioned by Premier ORLANDO, expressly included a compromise between Italian and Jugoslav territorial claims on the Adriatic. Furthermore, the Giornale d'Italia asserts that "Austria will find "that when victory is achieved Italy "is ready and generous." But the Rome Congress in April, when Italy took the leadership of the oppressed nationalities of Austria-Hungary striving for freedom, expressly aimed at the breakup of the Dual Monarchy and the establishment of free nations in its place. Does SONNINO's organ think that Italian spirit cannot be kept up without a traditional enemy to growl at?

Reactionary papers in Italy declare that there is no difference between SONNINO and ORLANDO, and that anybody who says there is must be regarded as a troublemaker. But when SONNINO's organ disavows an agreement made by ORLANDO, it seems to outsiders that there is a difference. This same Giornale d'Italia some three months ago published an article full of sympathy for Austria and full of hatred for the Slavs. Do the mass of Italians hate their possible allies and love their traditional enemies? SONNINO's paper would have us think so.

The liberal press of Italy with one accord supports ORLANDO and the policy of friendship toward the Slavs who are struggling for freedom. The Tribuna, formerly a "neutralist" organ, says that Italians must consider if new conditions do not demand a more friendly attitude toward the Slavs and an abandonment of the claims to Slav territory on the Adriatic. But the rest of the world thought that Italy had done exactly this.

The Popolo d'Italia, organ of the pro-war radicals, has put the matter very clearly when it says that Italy must choose between the ideals of MAZZINI and those of METTERNICH—between the concept of harmony and co-operation among free peoples and the old idea of severely self-interested diplomacy, of getting as much of other people's territory as you can, and of keeping up the old hostility and suspicion between the nations. From the present statements of the Italian papers it would seem that SONNINO follows METTERNICH—no doubt with entire patriotism and full belief that this is the right and proper course. But METTERNICH's ideals are outgrown.

The other allied nations will not believe that after the victory of last June Italy is prepared to disavow agreements made when the fortunes of war were going against her. There was principle as well as interest in the agreements made at Rome in April, and ORLANDO, NITTI, and their liberal colleagues are likely to have the sympathy of liberals in all the allied countries in their struggle to keep Italy true to the ideals of MAZZINI.

TOPICS OF THE TIMES.

A Ban Put on Sunday Automobiling.

Love of the Fuel Administration, never what without exaggeration could be called ardent, will be further cooled by its request—to be turned into an order later if necessary—that all Sunday automobiling not directly connected with war work be stopped. This means a deprivation that will be severe, or at any rate severely felt by a great number of people, and some of them at first thought may be inclined to resent the loss, on the only day they can have it, of a pleasure which they have regarded as innocent and healthful—recreative, in the true sense of that word. This resentment, however, will disappear from the minds of all good citizens as soon as they think the matter over, and it cannot be doubted that they will heed the board's request as cheerfully as they have other, and really much more serious, interferences with established habits and permitted joys.

Motoring for pleasure stopped so long ago in England, France, and Italy that the people there have almost forgotten that they ever did it, and the change is occasionally recalled only as one of the many hardships and sacrifices that nations engaged in a great war and determined to win it endure as a matter of course. Sunday motoring is almost wholly of a "nonessential" sort, and that there has been an enormous amount of it, with a correspondingly enormous consumption of gasoline, is known to everybody who lives near or frequents any main highway. The consumption amounts to millions of gallons—one estimate makes it 27,000,000 each Sunday for the whole country, but that allots five gallons to every car there is, and not quite all of them do go out on that day. With due reductions made, however, the total is still impressive, especially when correlated with the prices which our allies have to pay for the little gasoline they have and with the readiness with which they have turned over their whole supply to their armies and navies. We can and must imitate their example, for we are in the war no less than they are, and it is our privilege as well as our duty to the extent of our ability to lessen their burdens by sharing them.

Enforced abstention from Sunday automobiling will have the good effect of forcing on the attention of some people the fact that we are at war—a fact which all of them know, but seemingly do not yet quite realize. Another advantage is that automobile accidents, so called, will be reduced at least 20 per cent. by the elimination of the one-day chauffeurs.

Congressmen with a Grievance.

Had it been understood in England as well as here how slight is the influence, and therefore how small the power, of such men as Representative LUNDEEN of Minnesota and Representative DILLON of South Dakota, the British probably wouldn't have taken the trouble to withhold from these far-wandering statesmen privileges on the battleline that were accorded to them by the French. That, however, is not to say that their exclusion from the British lines was not justified. It was, for both men, while in Congress, have taken pains to vote wrong on every important war measure that came before them during a service which, fortunately, is soon to end, for their constituents have had enough of them and refused to renominate them at the recent primaries.

But apparently it was not the Congressional record of these men that led the British authorities to take the action they did. Talk concerning the war and our allies in which they persistently indulged while on the steamer crossing the Atlantic so offended both civilian and military fellow-passengers that representatives of each class were moved to report that the two Congressmen did not deserve to be received as guests by the objects of their animosity, and as a result they failed to receive the courtesies and favors which have been extended as a matter of course to other Americans occupying positions like theirs.

This, whether humiliating or not to them, is humiliating to Americans in general. We shall have to endure it with whatever equanimity we can command, but with a hope, naturally, that the State Department will be more careful, hereafter, in issuing passports, and at least try to find reasons for not giving them to men who, though Representatives, are so far from being representative that their company is not wanted by foreign friends about the sincerity and warmth of whose regard for Americans, as such, there can be no question.

The incident is to be regretted only because it will provide with a subject for much loud talk against England the various groups here whose chief joy in life—and almost only means of support—is the revival and exploitation among the seditious and the ignorant of ancient animosities which the patriotic and the intelligent now are more than willing to forget.

His Admission Seems a Large One.

Did Senator PENROSE mean just what, and all, he said when, in criticising the Postal Censorship for excluding from the foreign mails the Thomas aircraft report, he remarked, "If this policy is to be followed, what's the use of debating anything here?"

Of course the press likes to be complimented—to be told how powerful it is and how much the running of the world depends on its enterprise, ability, and virtue. But it hardly expected to hear that without access to the news columns of the papers the Senate of the United States might as well shut up shop.

Is all the talking of the Senators, then, directed to distant auditors whom they can reach only through the aid of the press? Can and do they decide nothing for themselves and among themselves? That has been suspected before, but never before has it been admitted as frankly as by Senator PENROSE.

Paper Hearing Is Postponed.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The National War Labor Board has postponed until Sept. 11 the hearing scheduled for today in the case of the newsprint paper industry. This action was taken because of the absence from Washington of C. A. Crocker and T. M. Guerin, comprising the section of the board which has had the case in charge.

CONGRATULATIONS.

I have no words of sympathy to waste
On those brave boys who sail across the sea
To give their youth, their strength and energy,
And of war's mighty rack and rue to taste!
To one and all I say, with eager haste,
I envy you so glorious a chance!
Would that I, too, might serve, "Somewhere in France,"
Or with Italia's host or Britain's band—
Fighting for honor, for my native land!
For stalwart natures, ideals true and chaste,
There is no forum greater than that field
Proud should they be who make such conflict yield
That splendid Peace on which the nations thrive!

I have no tears of sympathy to shed
For those frail women who must give a son
To aid in deeds that now are being done
Nay, I am filled with happiness instead!
For, in the lists of human enterprise,
What goal shines brighter in ambitious eyes
Than this, to which the patriot soul is led?
What life is nobler, and, if death must be,
Whence comes more glory to eternity
Than from the annals of Wrong's overthrow—
The righteous conquest of an evil foe?
Soldiers and Mothers, you are blessed by fate!
I do not pity—I congratulate!

'PEP' OF AMERICANS BRACES KING GEORGE

Monarch Borrows Our Slang to Tell Canadian Editors How Sammies Impress Him.

FINDS THEM STIMULATING

Sure Now That Germany Cannot Win—New British Air Program Born of Revenge.

A company of twenty-four Canadian editors and publishers arrived at an American port yesterday after spending six weeks in England and France as guests of the British Government, represented by Lord Beaverbrook, Minister of Information. The Canadian journalists visited the great munition plants of England and Scotland and saw thousands of women doing the work men used to do at forges, lathes, derricks, and furnaces.

The party went over the western battlefront, from Ypres to Verdun. They were received by the King and Queen of England, by President Poincaré of France, and Premier Clemenceau, by Field Marshal Haig and his staff, by Marshal Foch and General Pétain, by Major Gen. Lewis and the officers of the American Army under his command, and they were dined by Lloyd George, by the Lord Mayor of London, and many other prominent men of England. And wherever they went and whomever they met, while there was unbounded enthusiasm for what the Canadian Government and Canadian soldiers had done to prosecute the war, the big thing in the minds of British and French statesmen and the British and French people was the coming to the war of the army of the United States in such numbers in so amazingly short a time.

The way the allied Governments and peoples feel on this score was shown in a talk W. R. Givens of The Kingston Standard and three other members of the party had with King George. The King received the editors in groups of four so that, as he explained, he might become better acquainted with each one and talk with each more intimately. Mr. Givens had referred to the work done by the four hundred Canadian officers trained at the Kingston military college. King George knew of the deeds of some of the officers and that led him to speak of the great debt the British Empire owed to all its colonials.

"And the Americans," continued the King, "are very wonderful. It is an inspiration and an earnest of victory simply to look at them. Their great height, their perfect physical fitness, their fresh young faces and their boundless enthusiasm are very stimulating to us who have had to endure four years of the brunt and the horror of war. What the Americans have really done for us is, perhaps, best expressed in their own idiom. They have 'put pep into us.' They have given to us and to the French of their pep and we know now that we cannot lose this war."

F. D. L. Smith of The Toronto Daily News goes back to Canada more impressed than ever with what Great Britain has done. He said that everybody knew that Germany would have won the war long ago had it not been for the British Navy, but he goes further, and says the Allies could not win now if it were not for the British Navy, because American troops and American supplies could not be transported overseas but for its protection. And then he told of Britain's new air campaign It would be prosecuted, he said, with an altogether new type of airplane, heavier than any ever constructed, and many of the craft have been fitted with Liberty motors. These planes, Mr. Smith believes, will be heard from frequently, and soon above the great German naval base in the bight of Heligoland. This particular editor, by the way, went up in one of the new planes driven by a Liberty motor, which lifted him and his pilot 10,000 feet above London in just eight and a half minutes. Mr. Smith imparted the interesting piece of news, told to him by Winston Churchill, that the British Army in the field today is the largest of the allied armies.

M. R. Jennings of The Edmonton Journal, a graduate of Rochester University of the class of 1892 and a star baseball player, had something to say about the sacrifices in daily living that the people of England and France are making cheerily and willingly.

"Why," said Mr. Jennings, "the streets of London are dark, but the streets of Paris are even darker. The streets of both cities are so dark that it is quite impossible to recognize your best friend. All the shops are, of course, closed at night. It is absolutely impossible to buy milk anywhere in England, except for very young children and persons who are ill, and the same is true in Paris. But England is more closely rationed than France. There is no white bread to be had there at all.

"And you never hear a complaint from anybody. It is regarded as a part of everybody's 'bit.' In the railroad stations, if you are in a hurry for your trunk, you grab the first hand truck you can find, load your trunk on to it, and trundle it wherever you want it to go. In this and in all other ways the spirit of the British people is superb. But it has changed greatly in one particular. The people of England now are determined to be thoroughly avenged for the wrongs done to innocent noncombatants by German air raiders. From now on it is going to be an eye for an eye and a tooth for a tooth. British airmen will prey on German cities until they are as nearly destroyed as possible."

J. N. Woods, editor of The Calgary Herald, who was the Chairman of the party of editors, said the most interesting part of their visit to France was two days in the front trenches with the Canadians at Vimy Ridge, where they were continuously under fire.

"As proof of the confidence of the Canadians," Mr. Woods said, "they were rehearsing their crack troops back of the lines while the enemy was still advancing. From the beginning of June until early in July the Canadian Generals were training their best regiments at the rear for the counterattack. Famous fighting units were taken from the front while the Huns were still attacking. By the middle of July these soldiers had been trained to the top notch in the latest war tactics and were held back like hounds on a leash, grumbling and wondering why the word to go for the enemy did not come. When General Curry did give the order the Canadians went for the Huns with a dash and fighting spirit that swept the enemy aside like chaff before the wind. The Germans are beaten, and it is only a question of how much punishment they will stand before crying 'enough!' and accepting the terms of the Allies."

The party was made up of the following: W. A. Buchanan, M. P., Lethbridge Herald; Frank Carrel, Quebec Telegraph; Noel Chasse, Quebec L'Evenement; J. S. Douglas, Toronto Mail and Empire; W. R. Givens, Kingston Standard; M. R. Jennings, Edmonton Journal; W. F. Kerr, Regina Leader; E. H. Macklin, Manitoba Free Press; Oswald Mayrand, Montreal La Presse; W. R. McCurdy, Halifax Herald; Alf Miller, London Free Press; W. C. Nichols, Vancouver Province; E. Norman Smith, Ottawa Journal; A. G. Penny, Quebec Chronicle; R. L. Richardson, Winnipeg Tribune; Fernand Rinfret, Montreal Le Canada; Chas. Robillard, Montreal La Patrie; J. Adjutor Savard, Quebec Le Soleil; F. D. L. Smith, Toronto News; W. J. Southam, Hamilton Spectator; J. L. Stewart, Chatham World; John Weld, London Farmers' Advocate, and J. H. Woods, Calgary Herald.

PRESIDENT SAVES SOLDIER.

Extends Clemency to Deserter Sentenced to Death.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Executive clemency for Private Franklin W. Czarnecki, Medical Corps, who was sentenced to death by military court-martial because he left his command at the port of embarkation on the eve of departure overseas, was announced today by the War Department. President Wilson commuted the sentence to dishonorable discharge, forfeiture of all pay, and confinement at hard labor for two years.

He approved the conviction on the charge of absence without leave, but not that on the charge of desertion.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

LONDON, Aug. 28. — Ambassador Page's retirement, owing to ill health, has aroused general sympathy in London in both American and British circles. For some time before he acted on his physician's advice and went to the seaside early in Summer he had not been a well man and showed evidences of the strain which his long and arduous work had entailed. It was hoped that the bracing air of Kent—he spent his holiday at Sandwich, once famous for its golf, but now given over to more warlike purposes—would restore his health and strength, but his request to the President to be relieved of his duties shows his recovery was not as complete as could have been desired.

It has been some months since Mr. Page—he always disliked the title of "Dr.," which most of the English papers insisted on giving him and which is used in the official notice of his retirement issued here—made a public appearance in London, and while still attending to the duties of the Embassy he frequently had to refuse invitations to gatherings at which his presence as speechmaker was desired. Mr. Page carried on the tradition of scholarship and oratory associated with the American Embassy in London, and while assured of a warm welcome here because of his office, he established himself firmly in the regard of all with whom he came personally in contact.

Mr. Page is at present in Scotland with Mrs. Page, whose kindness of heart and unassuming disposition have made for her many warm friends in this country.

By The Associated Press.

LONDON, Aug. 28, (Associated Press.)—Regret over the departure of Walter Hines Page, American Ambassador, from the social and literary like of London is expressed in this morning's papers, which speak of him as one of the most successful diplomats ever at the Court of St. James's.

"Mr. Page was a worthy successor of Lowell, Bayart and Choate," says The Express. "His term of office was a hard one and he served his country and ours admirably well."

McADOO DENOUNCES RUMOR

Suspects Germans of Starting Tale of Seizure of Savings Here.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28. — Reports that the Government might confiscate savings bank deposits were denied today by Secretary McAdoo and denounced as probably German propaganda.

"My attention has been called," said the Secretary, "to an insidious propaganda that is being carried on, probably by secret agents of Germany, to sow seeds of distrust in the minds of savings bank depositors by false rumors that the United States Government is contemplating the confiscation of the savings of the people. The absurdity of these statements is manifest.

"In order, however, to allay the fears of the few who might be alarmed by such reports, I repeat that these rumors are wholly baseless."

ADMIRAL WILSON PROMOTED

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Selection of Rear Admiral Henry B. Wilson, now commanding the American Naval Forces in French waters, to be a Vice Admiral in command of part of the Atlantic fleet, was announced today by the Navy Department. He will succeed Vice Admiral De Witt Coffman, who will take command of the Fifth Naval District, with headquarters at Hampton Roads. A successor in command of the forces in French waters has not been announced.

These changes will not go into effect probably before Dec. 1. The rank of Vice Admiral being temporary and dependent upon duty with the fleet, Admiral Coffman will revert to his regular rank of Rear Admiral when he arrives at Hampton Roads.

SHIFT IN GERMAN COMMAND.

Rupprecht May Stay Out Longer to Avoid Blame, Swiss Hear.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Dispatches from Switzerland today say it is reported in Zurich that the German high command is undergoing interesting modifications.

The leave of Crown Prince Rupprecht of Bavaria, who has returned home to remain several weeks, will probably be prolonged. It is suggested that the interests of the Bavarian dynasty demand that the Prince shall not be left at the head of the army, since its situation at the front is becoming dangerous.

BENNETT CHARGES FORGERY

Writes to Samuel S. Koenig That It Was Committed by Workers.

Ex-Senator William M. Bennett, candidate for the nomination for Lieutenant Governor, sent a letter last night to Samuel S. Koenig, Chairman of the New York County Republican Committee, telling him that forgeries had been committed by workers in the Sixth Assembly District, of which Koenig is leader, in the filing of declinations of candidates named for places on the County Commitee from the district in opposition to Koenig's men.

"I had thought that the lesson of last Fall, when approximately sixty Election Inspectors were sent to jail for frauds in the Republican city primaries, would have assured an honest primary this year," Mr. Bennett wrote. "But I discover that in your own Assembly district a number of forgeries have been committed by your workers. The ticket in your district was put up, of course, with the idea that it would win, but also with the idea of making a test as to whether an honest primary election could be conducted under your management."

Mr. Bennett said last night that one of the alleged forgeries had been detected readily through the fact that the man whose name had been forged was the brother of a man attached to Mr. Bennett's law office.

Samuel S. Koenig said last night at the Federal Club, headquarters of his district organization, that he had not received Mr. Bennett's letter, nor did he know that any charge of dishonest practices had been made against workers in his district by Mr. Bennett or anybody else.

"The statement that I had informed an alleged suspect to whom reference is made by Mr. Bennett that he was about to be arrested and had better get bail is absolutely false. I know nothing at all about this matter."

PROHIBITION BILL DELAYED.

Senate Will Take Up Measure Today—Compromise Advanced.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Plans of Senate leaders for compromise legislation on national wartime prohibition proposed to become effective July 1, 1919, instead of Jan. 1 next, moved forward today with the holding of additional conferences and the holding of hearings by the Agriculture Committee.

The program for the bill's consideration today on the floor was upset by the death of Senator James of Kentucky, causing adjournment of the Senate, but tomorrow it is purposed to bring the bill before the Senate for continuous consideration until disposal. Some Senate leaders believe it may be passed before adjournment, under the compromise plan, but others believe more time will be required. Possibility of the compromise negotiations being upset also make the bill's future uncertain.

Ohio Republicans for Prohibition.

COLUMBUS, Ohio, Aug. 28.—By an overwhelming viva voce vote, the Republican State Convention in session here adopted a platform today strongly indorsing State and national prohibition, woman suffrage, and a vigorous prosecution of the war to a victorious close.

LEWIS PREDICTS THAT HE WILL WIN

AID FOR ATTORNEY GENERAL

Prominent Republicans Sign Open Letter in Which They Pledge Their Support to His Candidacy.

Attorney General Merton E. Lewis, following the publication last night of an open letter signed by more than a score of influential Republicans pledging their support to his candidacy, made a statement in which he predicted that he would be nominated.

"The confidence of Governor Whitman and his managers is not based upon an accurate knowledge of the situation in this State," said Mr. Lewis. "Their claims that they will carry all of the counties with the possible exception of Albany are absurd.

"I have reason to believe that I shall carry approximately half of the counties, including some of the large counties of the State, and that I shall receive a large vote in many of the counties in which I may not actually obtain a majority. I am not basing this statement upon guesses. Of course, there is an uncertain element in the situation because of the large increase in the probable vote due to the fact that women now have the right to vote, but my information is that the women are not likely to support Governor Whitman to any greater extent than the men will support him."

The signatures which appeared under the open letter included: United States Senator James W. Wadsworth, Jr., Henry W. Taft, James M. Beck, Nicholas Murray Butler, Mortimer L. Schiff, ex-Governor Horace White, Elon R. Brown, President pro tem. of the Senate; Senators Henry M. Sage of Albany and George Cromwell of Richmond, Charles D. Hilles, ex-Chairman of the Republican National Committee; John A. Sleicher, Frank H. Platt, James R. Sheffield, Robert C. Morris, James A. Burden, R. Ross Appleton, William M. K. Olcott, William Barnes, William L. Ward, ex-Senators Harvey D. Hinman of Broome, Edgar Truman Brackett of Saratoga, and Nathaniel A. Elsberg of New York, Job E. Hedges, Francis S. Bangs, Meier Steinbrinck, William Muldoon, and Paul Rochester. Their letter said:

> You have exercised the functions of your office in an intelligent, sane, impersonal, conservative, law-abiding manner. Likewise we recognize the efficient work done by your office under your direction in the official investigations made which resulted in uncovering the plotting against the Government on the part of disloyals.
> Your endeavor to restore to its full effectiveness party government, with its consequent responsibility as an instrument for creating and maintaining sound public opinion in Governmental policies and administration, inspires confidence, and appeals directly and persuasively to enrolled Republicans. Your position that amendments to the Constitution of the United States should be ratified only when they reflect the opinion of the voters of the State directly expressed is consistent, logical, and fully within the spirit of the Constitution.
> Your ambition to be Governor, frankly announced, commends itself to all who hate hypocrisy, believe in sincerity, and are committed to the doctrine that public office is a sacred trust.

Albert J. Berwin, Republican leader of the Seventh Assembly District in Manhattan, one of the banner Republican districts in the city, came out for Mr. Lewis yesterday. It is understood that while the Republican county organization has indorsed Governor Whitman for a third term, the organization in the Seventh is split and half of the enrolled Republicans in the district will vote for Mr. Lewis on Tuesday.

See Turn to Lewis.

Friends of Mr. Lewis profess to see a turn of the tide in Manhattan in favor of Governor Whitman's rival. Yesterday word reached Mr. Lewis at his campaign headquarters in the Murray Hill Hotel that he was gaining strength in the Eleventh Assembly District, where he made a speech on Monday night.

Mrs. Eleanor Van Cott Whitcomb, Captain of the thirteenth election district of the Eleventh Assembly District, appeared at the Lewis campaign headquarters yesterday, wearing a Lewis button. She said she put it on Monday night when, after the Attorney General had spoken, Mrs. Mollie E. Wilkinson, leader of the Republican women in the district, had called upon all the women election district Captains to go out and hustle for Whitman or resign.

The women are not by any means so unanimously for Governor Whitman as his campaign managers seem to believe. In the Seventh Assembly District, Mrs. Susan Sheldon Gleason, leader of the district, proposed a Whitman resolution to twenty-five of the women election district Captains and received only one vote. Later the resolution came before a meeting of ninety candidates, men and women, for places on the County Committee from the seventh district and was debated but dropped before a vote was had. Yesterday W. H. Vary, until recently Master of the State Grange, came out in support of Mr. Lewis.

Misused by Governor, He Says.

"Governor Whitman has misused the Agricultural Department of the State," he said, "and has greatly lessened its efficiency by converting it into a political machine. He has proved an uncertain quantity on every agricultural issue that has come before him. I favor the nomination of Attorney General Lewis for Governor."

Governor Whitman was making speeches up-State yesterday. In his absence ex-Congressman W. W. Cocks, his campaign manager, declined to comment on a statement by Senate Leader Elon R. Brown in which he said that while Governor Whitman has been an advocate in public of a "dry" State, the Executive Mansion at Albany during the four years he has occupied it has been exceedingly "wet."

Attorney General Lewis last night made speeches at Republican meetings in the First, Seventh, Sixteenth, and Eighteenth Assembly Districts in Manhattan.

SINK BOAT ON LAKE GARDA.

Italians Also Raid Austrian Lines in Mountains and Take Prisoners.

ROME, Aug. 28.—An enemy motor boat seen on Lake Garda, on the Trentino front, was sunk yesterday by Italian artillery, says the official statement issued today by the Italian War Office.

Italian reconnoitring patrols captured prisoners in the Posina Valley and in Val di Assa. Patrols also were very active in the Grappa region, where they took some prisoners and destroyed an enemy advanced post.

SKIRMISHES IN ALBANIA.

Austrians Not Pressing Advantage on Their New Front.

Eastern Theatre, Aug. 27.—There were artillery duels on both banks of the Vardar and in the Cerna bend. British aviators bombed enemy camps north of Doiran.

ROME, Aug. 28.—Army Headquarters today gave out the appended bulletin:

In Albania, on Tuesday morning, Italian cavalry, reconnoitring south of the lower Semeni River, drove back hostile detachments and captured prisoners.

46 MORE AMERICANS LOCATED IN CAMPS

SENDS OUTFITS TO CAPTIVES

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—The American Red Cross announced today that it has been obliged to establish a tailor shop at Berne, Switzerland, to supply uniforms to captured American Army and Navy officers, who are often reaching German prison camps after having lost their clothing or shoes.

"The officers," said a statement by the Red Cross, "in being hustled back from the front, lose their overcoats, blouses, and even trousers. Frequently their leather shoes, which are greatly coveted by the Germans, are taken from them, and they are forced to wear wooden shoes. The clothing of others is so damaged in strenuous fighting as to need replacement.

"The stripping of prisoners apparently takes place only at the front in the heat and confusion of battle. At the prisons, camp committees appointed by the prisoners themselves, see that American prisoners receive and enjoy the supplies sent them. Each individual, moreover, returns a signed receipt card for each parcel to the American Red Cross representatives at Berne."

POLICE TO GET MORE PAY.

Firemen Also Share Increase to Take Effect Sept. 1.

Mayor Hylan announced yesterday, following a conference of the members of the Board of Estimate in his office, that it had been tentatively agreed to grant policemen and firemen of the first grade who did not receive any increase in salary during the present year an increase of $150 a year, to become effective Sept. 1. This will bring the salary of such policemen and firemen up to $1,650 a year.

The question of salary increases for other employes of the city was also discussed but no agreement was reached. The matter will be taken up at another session of the board members.

ITALIANS HONOR AMERICAN.

Special Cable to THE NEW YORK TIMES.

MILAN, Aug. 28.—The Italian supreme command has awarded a silver medal for bravery in warfare in memory of Lieutenant Edward Mackey, the first American to lay down his life on the Italian front. Mackey, who was a volunteer attached to the Red Cross, perished during the furious bombardment at the outset of the mid-June Austrian attack on the Piave, while rushing under a hail of shells to succor the wounded in the front line.

NURSE IS ACCUSED.

ANDOVER, Mass., Aug. 28.—Mrs. Bessie Mae Skeels, a nurse of Bayonne, N. J., who attended Miss Florence M. Gay, a teacher at the Abbot Girls' School, in her last illness, has been held here on a charge of larceny of $300 in jewelry from Miss Gay. It is expected she will be arraigned on Friday. When Mrs. Skeels was arrested she stepped into an adjoining room and soon after was found seriously ill. She is recovering at the Lawrence Hospital. It is stated by the police that she took poison.

The body of Miss Gay, who died in December, it is just learned, was exhumed several weeks ago. District Attorney Henry G. Wells said tonight the results of the examination justified that action. The cause of Miss Gay's death was given as apoplexy. Mrs. Skeels was called to the Gay home a year ago to nurse the mother, Mrs. Rosamond Gay. After the daughter's death, Mrs. Gay went to Georgetown with relatives. She died two weeks ago.

Mrs. Skeels is 51, but looks younger, and has attained local note as an elocutionist. Alfred J. Lundgren of 53 Whittier Street, Andover, who was to have married Mrs. Skeels tomorrow, is standing by her loyally.

CARDINAL FARLEY GAINING.

MAMARONECK, Aug. 28.—Cardinal Farley was much better today. He seems to be improving steadily and gaining strength every day. He was able to take more nourishment today than at any other time since his illness. The Cardinal appears to be quite strong, has a good appetite and expects soon to be able to sit up. No official bulletin was issued tonight, but Mgr. Carroll, the Cardinal's secretary, said that while the prelate could not be considered out of danger he was very much encouraged by his continued improvement.

FORD DENIES FLAG STORY.

Special to The New York Times.

ASHEVILLE, N. C., Aug. 28.—Henry Ford today, when asked about the charge made by Representative Rodenberg that Mr. Ford had said he would not fly the American flag after the war, as it was only a cloth symbol, replied he had made no such statement.

A. H. Smith's Home Burned.

MOUNT KISCO, Aug. 28.—The beautiful frame and stone residence of A. H. Smith, Regional Director of Railroads, at Bedford and Chappaqua Roads, was burned to the ground today. The loss is estimated at more than $150,000. Four other buildings and a bungalow were also destroyed, but the barns were saved by the Mount Kisco Fire Department.

Betrothed to Midshipman Jimenis.

Mr. and Mrs. Meredith F. Montague of 55 East Sixty-fifth Street announce the engagement of their daughter, Miss Emily Triplett Montague, to Midshipman Oswald Jimenis, U. S. N., the eldest son of Mr. and Mrs. J. Oswald Jimenis of this city, and a Yale graduate in the 1910 class. Before entering the service Mr. Jimenis was in business with his father in the firm of Jimenis & Co. Miss Montague made her debut in New York, but has spent much of her time in Virginia, her former home. Owing to Mr. Jimenis's sea duties, no date has been set for the marriage.

Miss Archer to Wed Capt. Haskew.

The engagement has been announced of Miss Beatrice Copleson Archer, daughter of Mr. and Mrs. John J. Archer of 1,981 Madison Avenue, New York, to Captain Richard Selwyn Haskew, Royal Artillery, and the only son of the late R. G. Haskew and Mrs. Haskew of Forest Gate, London, England. Miss Archer is engaged in active service with the British Red Cross in Egypt. The wedding is planned for the termination of the war.

Morse-Hoe Engagement.

Miss Black Wed to Lieut. Stolz.

Carter-Prentiss.

NEW BRUNSWICK, Aug. 28.—The marriage of Miss Margaret Hamilton Prentiss, daughter of the late Professor Robert W. Prentiss of Rutgers College, and Roland Carter of New York, a lawyer, was solemnized last evening at the Prentiss home. Dr. John H. Gillespie performed the ceremony. Mr. and Mrs. Carter will make their home in Brooklyn.

OLLIE M. JAMES, SENATOR, IS DEAD

ADMINISTRATION CHAMPION

BALTIMORE, Aug. 28.—Senator Ollie M. James of Kentucky, died at Johns Hopkins Hospital at 6:45 A. M. today of an acute affection of the kidneys. Mrs. James and the Senator's brother, E. H. James, were with him when the end came.

Senator James had been a patient at the hospital for about three months. Physicians at first believed that he had a good chance to regain his health and an operation was performed. Later his condition became more serious and transfusion of blood was made on several occasions. The Senator rallied recently when informed of his renomination to the Senate, but later his condition again became grave and he steadily grew weaker.

Senator Ollie M. James was born in Crittendon County, Kentucky, on July 27, 1871, the son of L. H. and Elizabeth J. James, and received his education at public schools in Kentucky. He was early thrown in the midst of a political atmosphere by serving as a page in the Kentucky Legislature, when he was 16 years old. Soon afterward he studied law under the tutorship of his father and was admitted to the Kentucky Bar in 1891.

Senator James served in the House of Representatives for ten consecutive years, from 1903 to 1913. In 1912 Senator James ran for Senator from Kentucky, and with the withdrawal of Senator T. H. Poynter from the race was elected with no opposition. His term in the Senate would have expired in 1919.

As a delegate from Kentucky Senator James attended the Democratic National Convention in 1912 at Baltimore, and was elected Permanent Chairman of the convention. To him as Chairman fell the task of making the speech notifying Mr. Wilson of his nomination for President. At the convention, however, Senator James had advocated the nomination of Champ Clark rather than Mr. Wilson or Mr. Bryan, although he had long been the intimate and personal friend of the latter.

At the Democratic National Convention at St. Louis in 1916 Senator James was again chosen Permanent Chairman of the convention and delivered one of his famous speeches in laudation of everything that President Wilson had done during his first term. He was also again appointed to notify President Wilson of his renomination.

Although somewhat of a pacifist before the war, Senator James was by no means for peace at any price, and as soon as war was declared devoted himself to speaking on patriotism and was one of the first to see the necessity of sending large forces to France, even at a time when many persons of prominence felt that our greatest effort must be directed to lending financial support to the Allies.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Both houses of Congress adjourned immediately today upon announcement of the death in Baltimore of Senator James of Kentucky, who had given long service in House and Senate and was universally popular. Committees were appointed to accompany the body to Kentucky tonight and attend the funeral at the James home at Marion.

Brief tributes to the dead Senator were paid today by his colleagues and resolutions of regret were adopted. The flags of the Capitol were ordered at half-mast for thirty days. Memorial services for former Senator Newlands of Nevada, arranged for today, were postponed until next Monday.

"It is with deep and genuine grief that I hear of the death of your distinguished husband. He had won the affection of everybody who really knew his quality, and I was proud to count myself among his closest friends. His loss is a very great one to me personally, to the great party which he served, and to the country which, in common with the rest of us, he loved and to which he sought to give his best.

The death of Senator James makes the tenth Senator who has died since the United States entered the war.

Gov. Stanley to Name Successor.

FRANKFORT, Ky., Aug. 28.—Senator James, whose term would have expired March 4, 1919, was renominated at the Statewide primary held Aug. 3 last. With Governor A. O. Stanley rests the power of naming his ad interim successor and the authority of naming a candidate to be voted on at the election next November rests with the Democratic State Executive Committee.

That an ad interim appointment will be made generally is accepted, while the consensus of well-informed opinion is that Governor Stanley in due time will seek the nomination at the hands of the commitee, the members of which are regarded as his close political friends.

Dr. William Lawton Thompson.

Dr. William Lawton Thompson died yesterday afternoon from Bright's disease in the Post-Graduate Hospital, of which he was a member of the staff. Born in Portland, Me., forty-one years ago, Dr. Thompson was graduated from Bowdoin College, after which he attended the Johns Hopkins Medical School, Baltimore. He had been in New York City for four years, with office at 40 East Forty-first Street, and living at 322 West Fifty-seventh Street. For the last year he had been connected with the Post-Graduate Hospital, and was also visiting physician of the Blytheville Home. Dr. Thompson was also assistant to Dr. F. H. Albee, orthopedic surgeon, and collaborated with him in writing a book on orthopedic surgery.

Clifford Monroe De Mott.

Clifford Monroe De Mott, who was for many years prominent in the business and social life of New York City, died Tuesday at his home in New Rochelle, in his sixty-second year. He was born in the old Ninth Ward in Greenwich Village, and his business address was 396 Broadway. He was at one time Captain of Company G, Twenty-second Regiment, N. Y. N. G. Mr. De Mott was a member of the Seniors Golf Club and the Wykagyl Golf Club. He was also a member of the Republican Club of New York, the Men's Club of New Rochelle and the New Rochelle History Club.

Arthur Playfair, Actor, Dead.

Arthur Playfair was born at Elichpoor, India, on Oct. 20, 1869. His first appearance on the London stage was in December, 1887. He played many parts on the English stage and came to America in 1901 and 1904. In 1904 he appeared in the United States as Bernard Mandeville in "Letty." One of his biggest successes was gained as Butler in "The Man from Blakley's," on its original production at the Prince of Wale's and on its revival at the Haymarket in 1906. Mr. Playfair appeared in various music halls as a mimic and also in sketches.

The Rev. Dr. William H. Vibbert, for more than fifty years a prominent Episcopal Minister, Vicar Emeritus of Trinity Chapel, Twenty-fifth Street, near Broadway, died Tuesday at the home of his daughter, Mrs. Frederick W. Keasbey, in Morristown, N. J. He was 78 years old. He suffered a stroke of paralysis in January of last year, from which he never quite recovered.

Dr. Vibbert was born in New Haven, Conn., the son of the Rev. Dr. Vibbert, for more than fifty years rector of St. St. James's Church, Fair Haven, Conn. He was educated at the Episcopal Academy of Connecticut and at Trinity College, Hartford, where he was graduated in 1858 and received the degree of A. M. in 1861. He also attended the Berkeley Divinity School at Middletown, Conn., in which he taught Hebrew for a while. Dr. Vibbert became rector of Trinity Chapel in 1891, and before coming here he was rector of churches in Connecticut, Pennsylvania, and Illinois. He was ordained in 1863. He retired from the active rectorship of Trinity Chapel, after eighteen years of service, in 1909.

Among his writings are "A Guide to the Reading of the Hebrew Text," "A Plain Catechism on Confirmation," and "A Plain Catechism on Church Principles."

The funeral will be held tomorrow at 10:30 o'clock at Trinity Chapel. Interment will be at St. Luke's Church, Germantown, Penn.

MURRAY'S NET PLAY OVERWHELMS PELL

THROCKMORTON DEFEATED

A wealth of keen tennis play marked the continuation of the national singles championship on the courts of the West Side Tennis Club at Forest Hills yesterday afternoon, as the leaders in the sport clashed in third and fourth round matches. Four players are now ensconced in the round before the semi-final. They are Lieutenant Craig Biddle, S. Howard Voshell, William T. Tilden, 2d, and Walter Merrill Hall. Those who made their way through third round matches were Nathaniel W. Niles of Boston, Frederick B. Alexander, Robert Lindley Murray, Harry S. Parker and Beals C. Wright. One more marathon match was played in which Seiichiro Kashio was again a principal. When darkness called a halt, Lyle E. Mahan was leading his Japanese rival at 10-8, 10-8, 6-8, 6-6, unfinished.)

There were many prominent players who fell by the wayside in the course of the day, but for the most part the victors were forced to play the full limit of five sets before earning the verdict. Murray opened the day's play by scoring a decisive victory over Theodore R. Pell in straight sets, allowing his opponent only two games in the match and both of those in the first set. Murray's game showed marked improvement over that which he had before shown in the tournament and Pell could not interpose much of a defense against the brilliancy of his hard-hitting opponent.

William T. Tilden 2d, who has yet to be defeated this season, won in decisive fashion over Conrad B. Doyle of Washington. The hard-hitting Philadelphian swept through the first two sets with comparative ease, but Doyle, famous for his chop stroke, succeeded in gaining an early lead in the final set and the play was carried to 7-5 before he was forced to give over the laurels.

Tilden is now bracketed in the lower half of the draw with Walter Merrill Hall, who made his advance by defeating Walter T. Hayes of Chicago in a fiercely waged five-set encounter.

One of the best matches of the day was that which Frederick B. Alexander won from Harold A. Throckmorton. This contest was carried through five sets before the former internationalist defeated his younger rival. Throckmorton in the early stages of the conflict looked for all the world like the victor. He played tennis that was remindful of his highest flights of play, and partly because of this and partly because Alexander was very much off his game at the outset, Throckmorton was able to run off the first two sets to his credit by the rather one-sided scores of 6—2, 6—3.

The third set went along to deuce and then Throckmorton's game began to waver. His brilliancy was somewhat dimmed and Alexander was beginning to get his strokes working to better advantage, with the result that he took the set at 7—5. After that Throckmorton was unable to maintain his game on the high plane which he had earlier established. With Alexander's ground strokes becoming more dependable and with his low volley a strong weapon of offense. Throckmorton's game was shattered and the dashing young Jersey contender went down to defeat quickly. Alexander took the fourth set at love and the fifth set at 6—3.

Richards is one of the headiest young players who ever stepped on a court and he broke up Voshell's game in the first two sets with not only passing shots but with superb lobbing as well. In the third and fourth sets, under the sting of possible defeat, Voshell essayed the net position with more success and cut off Richards's returns with sharp volleying. The final set was a nip and tuck struggle, Richards making a wonderful stand against Voshell, but he could not quite supply the strength of play necessary to win. Voshell took the match at 5—7, 4—6, 6—0, 6—2, 7—5.

A four-set match was necessary before Niles earned the decision over Ralph H. Burdick of Chicago. It was the latter who all but defeated Tilden at Southampton recently and he brought to the course yesterday the same degree of courage and skill that he showed in the earlier tournament. It was largely a back-court game that the men played, and at this style of play Niles is completely at home. The first two sets went to Niles by a narrow margin, but in the third set the Bostonian was far surpassed by his Western rival, who allowed him only two games. The fourth set was carried to deuce but Niles was able to win at 7—5. Niles took the match at 7—5, 6—4, 2—6, 7—5.

MYERS'S BAT BEATS GIANTS.

The Robins celebrated the one hundred and forty-second anniversary of the Battle of Long Island and their baseball requiem for the duration of the war at Ebbets Field yesterday in approved style. They gave the fans present an idea of what the Battle of Long Island would have been in baseball when they furnished a ninth inning rally which ended in a Robin victory over the Giants, by a count of 8 to 7.

Hy Myers, was the eleventh-hour hero of the fray. His blow which just grazed the tip of Benny Kauff's outstretched left hand in its flight towards a stockade in centre field, scored Jake Daubert with the winning run, Zach Wheat had previously registered Burleigh Grimes with the tally that brought the Robins on an even footing with their neighbors.

Myers's blow filled the hearts of about 1,000 sailors from the Armed Guard, Brooklyn Navy Yard, and City Park Barracks, Brooklyn, with joy. They would probably make Hy at least a Rear Admiral if it was in their power.

Entering the ninth, Brooklyn was in the ruck by 7 to 6. Burleigh Grimes, who was walloped rather liberally during the afternoon, singled to centre. He stayed there while Johnston skied to Zimmerman and Olson fouled to McCarty. On Daubert's rap back of second, Burleigh advanced and then Zach Wheat scored him with the tying run on a single to right. Daubert took third and Wheat second on the play for Grimes at the plate.

Bob Steele who replaced Cecil Algernon Causey in the seventh, was derricked and Pol Perritt summoned to the hillock. Myers liked the first one Perritt offered him and lifted it high on a swift journey beyond Kauff. Benny made a great effort to bring the ball down, but just managed to get the tip of his glove on it after a hard run, while Daubert scampered over the rubber.

Then the Armed Guard Band played "The Star-Spangled Banner," while naval officers lowered Old Glory from its staff in centre field, and that was the end of baseball at Ebbets Field until the Hun is throttled.

BROWNS THRIVE ON SANDERS'S VAGARIES

Yankee Pitcher So Wild That St. Louis Accepts a 4 to 2 Present.

It is hard to determine just what made Sanders so wild in that third inning. It wasn't the crowd, for said crowd wasn't big enough to frighten a mouse. Tobin was the first of the Brown hitters to face Sanders in the third and he walked. Maisel also walked. The home plate might just as well have been out in Eighth Avenue for all Sanders knew. Sisler walked and filled the bases.

Many will wonder why Manager Huggins didn't take Sanders by the collar and point him in the general direction of the clubhouse. The reason Huggins didn't do this very thing was because he didn't have a pitcher to put in Sanders's place. He has only got four other pitchers and they have been all working every day at some time or another. It now takes three or four Yank pitchers to finish a life-sized game.

When Nunamaker, who made six hits Tuesday, faced Sanders, the pitcher forgot momentarily that he was untamed, and he struck Leslie out. At this point, the crowd behind first base stood put and waved his hat, to say nothing of emitting a lusty cheer. Pete Johns then spanked a bouncer toward Pratt, which merrily hopped out of Derrill's way, Tobin and Maisel scampering home while Sisler went to third. As Pratt was tossing Pete Johns out at first, Sisler scored.

Then Sanders grew wild again. Austin walked and the pitcher hit Severeid with the ball. In this crisis, big Dave Davenport struck out. In two other crises which bobbed up later in the game, Davenport also struck out.

For the first four innings the Yanks weren't able to hit the ball out of the infield, and Davenport set them down in one, two, three order. In the fifth, Pratt sent the ball out of the infield by hoising a fly to Nunamaker, who was playing in right field. Fournier singled and Ham Hyatt jammed a double to left field. Fournier tried to score, but the ball was relayed in, Tobin to Austin to Severeid, so fast that Jacques was nipped at the plate. Peck slapped a single to centre and scored Hyatt.

The Yanks got another in the seventh. Pratt doubled to left and tallied on Fourner's single to centre. Hannah looked as if he had a chance to get the runner out at the plate, but when the dust cleared away, the catcher didn't have the ball at all.

The Browns got their fourth run in the eighth when Sanders became unruly again. He hit Gedeon and, after Austin and Severeid had flied out, Sanders failed to fan Davenport, as he did on three other occassions and, not wanting to show any partiality against his rival pitcher, gave him a pass. Tobin then uncorked his third hit, a single to centre, and scored Gedeon.

TROTS TO WORLD'S RECORD.

Miss Bertha Dillon Defeats Mabel Trask and St. Frisco.

READVILLE, Mass., Aug. 28.—Miss Bertha Dillon was driven by Serrill to a world's trotting record for four-year-old fillies of 2:02¼ in the free-for-all trot at the Grand Circuit meeting at the Readville track today. The Philadelphia filly, owned by A. B. Coxe, beat the fast trotters St. Frisco and Mabel Trask in each of the three heats, making the record time in the second mile. The record was formerly 2:04¼, held by Bertha McGuire, and made at Toledo on July 24 last.

The largest crowd seen at the track since the American trotting derby was held here in 1902 was on hand to honor the veteran driver, "Pop" Geers, on Geers day. The veteran started in all four races, but failed to land a winner.

Nella Dillon, a sister of Miss Bertha Dillon, won the American Horse Breeders' Futurity, the largest purse event on the card.

A. A. U. OFFICERS HOLD OVER

The Nominating Committee of the Metropolitan Association A. A. U at its meeting last night adopted a recommendation that the present office holders be retained. This action was taken because of the war conditions. The recommendation will be presented at the annual meeting of the Metropolitan Association on Sept. 16. The only changes that are expected in the present office holders will be on the Registration Committee.

The officers of the association who are recommended for re-election are: President, Frederick W. Rubien; Vice President, Jacob W. Stumpf; Secretary-Treasurer, Herman Obertubbesing; Handicapper, George Matthews; Delegates to A. A. U. national meeting, F. W. Rubien, Justice Bartow S. Weeks, J. W. Stumpf, Jeremiah T. Mahoney, Murray Hulbert, and H. Obertubbesing.

PELHAM OARSMEN IN FRONT.

Pelham Bay Naval Training Station's sailor oarsmen gained victories in two of the three races held on the Hudson yesterday in the naval regatta of the New York A. C., and in the third was beaten for premier honors by about half a length.

The Pelham tars won the one-mile whaleboat race in walk-over fashion in 10:39 and captured the two-mile cutter race by about four lengths on the Granite State crew in 23:37 2-5. In the one-mile cutter race the Pelham crew was forced to take second place to Hingham. Station of Boston. One of the contesting crews was from the Argentine battle cruiser Rividavia. The South American sailors were third in the one-mile whaleboat race after a stirring struggle with the crew representing the Granite State.

RUMSON, N. J., Aug. 28.—Conceded a handicap of five goals, the Whippany River Club team defeated the Rumson four in the first match for the Whippany Cup played today on Herbert Field by a score of 12 to 7.

The critic!

For men 18 to 45—"Westpointer" shoes—the last officially approved.

LONG SHOT UPSETS FAVORITE AT SPA

Routledge, at 15 to 1, Easily Wins Adirondack Handicap by Five Lengths.

SARATOGA, Aug. 28.—Those who had looked forward to Billy Kelly starting in the Adirondack Handicap today were disappointed and in the absence of the king of the juveniles the $5,000 event was captured in spreadeagle fashion by Walter M. Jefford's Routledge, which started at odds of 15 to 1.

Billy Kelly had been set an unprecedented task by the handicappers, and though he was among the overnight entries, Commander Ross decided that it would be jeopardizing his chances in future events to start him with the crushing impost of 140 pounds on his back.

Picking winners was as hard as ever, the only favorite to success being New Haven, which captured the steeplechase from Kingston Pier, which was indifferently won. Willis Sharpe Kilmer's Sun Briar will make an attempt to lower Roamer's record for a mile tomorrow.

The summaries:

FIRST RACE.—For maiden 2-year-olds, claiming, purse $852.50, five furlongs. Time—1:00 1-5.

Sports Skirts Wanted.

Quite a few sports skirts for wear out of doors in the early Fall are wanted just now by buyers from many parts of the country. Since the bulk of this business was placed sometime ago, the present orders are taken to indicate that merchandise of this sort has already commenced moving over the counter and that the business now being placed represents filling-in needs. These skirts are usually quite short and wide enough to permit ample freedom of movement in walking or running. Corduroys and heavy sports silks are features in this trade, and khaki is a prominent color.

There was little change in the buying of gray goods in this market yesterday, as compared with Tuesday. Second hands continued to let out spot and near by goods, principally printcloths, at prices ranging from half a cent to a cent a yard over the Government's maximum first hand prices for these fabrics. The mills are not doing much in the way of selling, largely letting out only such odds and ends as are shown on the stock sheets. A fair business is passing, however, in sateens, twills, and other specialities.

This, in part, is what Mlle. Lemel, Paris correspondent of the Retail Millinery Association of America, has to say of the millinery situation on the other side: "Less and less blocked shapes (are seen,) in fact, we seem to neglect them more and more these days. Little toques, slightly draped, or medium hats, both having a soft appearance, are 'good.' As to shapes, there are still a few mushrooms, or turned up at the front and not quite flat at the back. Inclosed is a ribbon of a new material looking like thin leather. This color, geranium red, is much employed with gray, whether in this material or in velvet. In a previous letter I talked of silk cocardes. That silk trimming is still very successful, whether in cocardes or rather large new tassels, especially in that other new color 'incendie,' (fire,) which has a brownish cast very much on the order of henna."

Not so many shirts of solid colors in bright hues are selling for the Fall trade as were wanted during the Summer months just ending. The tendency is by no means toward dismal effects, but there is unmistakably greater conservatism in this direction now manifesting itself among buyers. The volume of Fall business thus far placed with wholesalers and manufacturers is both liberal and composed of practically the same percentage of high and low priced merchandise as prevailed in past seasons. If anything, the tendency is away from the two extremes of prices and toward the middle of the scale.

Fall styles in soft felt hats for men have not undergone any radical changes from those of last year. There is some indication that, in the better grade lines, felts of a surface somewhat rougher than usual will be more in evidence, but thus far this tendency seems to have confined itself pretty closely to these expensive lines. Brown, green, and gray, as in former seasons, are the basic colors in the hats which have sold in greatest volume to retailers, and some of these are in mixtures. Advancing prices will have more of an effect, it is thought, on the cheap grades of hats than on the medium and higher priced lines.

There has been quite some improvement in demand for hospital equipment of late. Inquiries from foreign markets also have been quite heavy during the past few months, and substantial business in this direction has been done. South American and Australian buyers are said to have been the most active. Prices in all lines have undergone quite a radical revision during the past year, and the problem of obtaining certain raw materials is becoming more difficult each day. The scarcity of labor has been felt in this no less than in other industries, and the new draft law now being formulated will undoubtedly make further inroads, not only on the help, but on factory executives as well.

Why They Are Holding Off.

The local representative of a number of out-of-town retail stores located in some of the smaller cities and towns of the country remarked yesterday that quite a few of them are purchasing less women's ready-to-wear garments in advance of the season this year than has been the case since he has been associated with them. Instead of plunging, in view of talk of shortages, delayed shipments, &c., the retailers in question say that there will be plenty of merchandise to be had before the season is very much older, especially when it is bought on a basis closely approximating cash payment. They also figure, according to the representative, that prices will be much more commensurate with actual values later on. These stores, he said, do not need their merchandise as early as some of the larger retailers do, and figure they have more to gain than lose by waiting for the plums to fall.

In accordance with the season, there is developing a demand for women's overalls of somewhat heavier materials than those which were used last Spring and this Summer. The active demand for garments of this sort, which started last Spring and has been increasing ever since, is said to be continuing on a good scale. The number of types of women's overalls is almost as varied as the number of models of women's dresses. Practically all styles of overalls are getting their share of the business now being placed. Those with detachable skirts which may be worn to and from work are among the leaders.

Drug and Chemical Markets will say today that miscellaneous drugs and fine chemicals are steady, with few price changes. Botanicals remain firm. Spices are unsettled, owing to uncertainty regarding future supplies. Colors and dyestuffs are in good demand and prices are firm. There is an increasing scarcity of dyewoods, and holders refuse to quote in the open market, preferring to hold stocks for regular customers while the situation is so uncertain regarding future shipments from primary points. The market for industrial chemicals is steady. There are very few offers of acids, except muriatic, the Government taking the bulk of the output.

Committees for Waist League.

Two important committees are to be named soon by the United Waist League of America, each of which will undertake work of considerable importance to the industry. One, which will be made up of ten waist manufacturers, will select the colors that are to be used for Spring, 1919, and which are to be placed on the organization's color card for the new season. It is expected that there will be about nine of these colors, this number having been contained in the league's Fall card. The second committtee will be made up of seven manufacturers, and will consider recommendations made for checking the pirating of employes from one manufacturer by another. This evil has assumed very serious proportions.

Last Day for Corporation Returns.

Internal Revenue Collectors in this city announced yesterday that today is the last day for filing undistributed corporation profit tax returns for the calendar year, or what is known as dormant capital. Returns must be filed by every corporation, whether domestic or foreign, which reported a net income for the calendar or fiscal year ended in 1917, regardless of whether it is subject to the tax imposed under this section of the law or not. There are heavy penalties for failure to file returns.

BUSINESS NOTES.

Sept. 19 is the date set for this year's election of officers and two-year Executive Committee members of the New York Credit Men's Association. The meeting will be held at 320 Broadway on that date at 12:30 P. M. The present "slate" offers for reelection as President, E. S. Boteler of G. K. Sheridan & Co.

Hillman & Israel, knit goods selling agents, 200 Fifth Avenue, are now representing the Emperor Knitting Mills of Brooklyn in addition to their other mills. The Emperor Mills manufacture women's all-wool sweaters, and their product will be sold to buyers large enough to handle case lots. This is the eighth mill represented by these agents.

CONSOLIDATED BUREAUS FOR RAILROAD TICKETS

Department Store System of Handling Transportation Will Be Started Next Week.

One of the easiest articles to be purchased in New York will be a railroad ticket after Labor Day, for the new department store system for handling transportation, including Pullman accommodations, steamship tickets, and baggage transfer in centralized offices will be started for the benefit of the public by the Federal Railroad Administration. Instead of forty-eight scattered offices now maintained by the different lines there will be four consolidated bureaus in Manhattan and one in Brooklyn prepared to handle tickets to all points.

The most important of the new offices occupies the old quarters of the Knickerbocker Trust Company at 64 Broadway, where a staff of sixty-seven salesmen will take care of the public. George A. Cullen, General Passenger Agent of the Lackawanna, who, as Chairman of the committee controlling all consolidated ticket offices east of the Mississippi, has been in charge of the arrangements for bringing the lines together, expects this one office to do a business of $8,000,000 annually, with a total turnover of $25,000,000 for the city. Charles K. Rath, formerly general agent of the passenger traffic department of the Lackawanna, will be in charge of this office.

Every facility for supplying information as to routes, hotels, and vacation resorts hitherto maintained by the different roads will be provided at the new offices, and the time required for getting tickets and Pullman accommodations will be greatly reduced. Illuminated signs over the counters make it an easy matter for the patron to find the representative of the line over which he wishes to travel, and roads serving the same general territory are grouped. Each salesman will have a complete stock of tickets within reach of his hands, and there will be none of the running back and forth which has been productive of delays under the old system. All except interline tickets are carried in drawers in front of the agent.

Three of the new offices will be opened Tuesday, at 64 Broadway, serving the financial district; 57 Chambers, serving City Hall and the downtown wholesale trade, and at 114 West Forty-second, serving the Times Square district. The fourth, at 31 West Thirty-second Street, for hotels and buyers, will not be ready until Sept. 23.

The consolidation will reduce annual rentals of the city offices from $389,000 to $100,000 a year, besides eliminating the trips from one office to another. The number of men now required will be reduced from 300 to 210. All of the new offices have been leased for ten years in the belief that even if the roads are returned to the stockholders the public will be unwilling to see the old competitive local offices restored. The new quarters have been beautifully finished, with mahogany counters, indirect lighting, individual telephones for every salesman, and every modern device for saving detail.

Coal Output Still Increasing.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Anthracite coal production for the week ended Aug. 24 showed an increase of 167,000 gross tons above the record for the preceding week. The total output, according to estimates of production furnished by the mines to the Fuel Administration, was 1,706,016 gross tons, compared with 1,538,416 gross tons for the week of Aug. 17, 1918, and 1,589,454 tons during the corresponding week of 1917.

FINANCIAL MARKETS

Stocks Quiet, but Firm—Increased Demand for Foreign Issues on Good War News.

Though the volume of dealings on the Stock Exchange yesterday was moderate and the advances scored in most issues limited, there was a decided accession of strength in securities from the remarkably good war reports. Any doubt as to the complete inability of the Teutonic allies to stop the offensive which presses without letup now at one point in the line, now at another, must have been dispelled by the consistent progress which General Foch has made since the failure of the final German offensive aimed at Paris. The brief mention of the number of prisoners and big guns made in the dispatches prove clearly the hollowness of the explanation furnished Berlin of a prearranged retirement. The stock market has not been buoyant, but it has been working consistently toward higher levels. With a new Government loan of record size soon to be launched, the banks have shown no disposition to remove the check which has been placed upon speculation through the agency of the Money Committee.

Steel rose yesterday to 116⅝, and though it reacted somewhat in the afternoon, the closing price recorded another advance. Most issues ran into selling on the rise and closed under the best prices of the session, but with few exceptions they maintained part of their gains at the close. The contrast between the strength of the general market and the behavior of General Motors, long held up by careful pool supervision, was striking. There was little stock pressed for sale because of the wide disparity between the best bid price and the previous sales, but it was enough to break the quotation 12 points. The Marine issues were active and strong, although the 6 per cent. debentures which are supposed to reflect the progress of the plans for liquidating part of the assets, did not reach par.

Bonds of the foreign Governments and municipalities have followed very closely the improving position of the Allies and the passing of the menace of further invasion of French territory. Yesterday the City of Paris 6s moved up to 95, with a $500 bond changing hands half a point higher. When the German offensive was threatening Paris this issue sold at 81⅝. Liberty 3½s were in less demand. The $15,000,000 Lehigh Valley bonds sold with the announcement and were being bid for at a premium within a few hours.

What The Iron Age refers to as imperative orders from abroad have widened still further the gap between current steel production and demand. Early estimates of the requirements for war purposes have been greatly exceeded, indicating clearly the tremendous scale on which preparations for the defeat of Germany are now being pushed.

STRONG TONE IN LONDON.

French and Italian Funds Dealt In Freely.

LONDON, Aug. 28.—On the Stock Exchange today the tone was strong, but without much increase in the volume of business. French and Italian funds made a good response to the continuous improvement in the rates of exchange. Industrials were the feature. There was a persistent demand for Imperial and Continental gas shares on the prospects after the war.

Shipping stocks were very firm. Cunards were prominent. Wireless shares improved. Gold-mining securities and particularly Eastern Rands attracted attention. Money was in good demand.

Trading Active on Paris Bourse.

PARIS, Aug. 28.—Trading was active on the Bourse today. Three per cent. rentes, 63 francs 50 centimes for cash. Exchange on London, 26 francs 37 centimes. Five per cent. loan, 87 francs 85 centimes.

TOPICS IN WALL STREET.

Pierce Oil Listing Figures.

The Pierce Oil Corporation has a net income of $1,140,191, after allowing liberally for depreciation and the Federal war taxes, in the five months ended May 31 last, compared with a net revenue of $1,609,489 in the full year of 1917. The figures were made public yesterday in a statement to the Stock Exchange with the listing papers for the stock. The five months' income was at the rate of approximately 14.80 per cent. a year on the $18,564,000 stock. In the preceding year, the amount carried to surplus was equal to about 9.20 per cent. on the amount of stock outstanding on Dec. 31. Reports from official quarters since the statement was made up as of May 31 have indicated further expansion of earnings, with Mexican refineries taking a leading part. The refinery at Vera Cruz with a capacity of 5,000 barrels of petroleum daily was not in operation during the last six years, but was reopened on June 20 last. The company's output of refined products averaged 20,283 barrels daily in the period covered by the statement, compared with 15,478 in 1917.

General Motors, under sales of no more than 600 shares, dropped sharply again yesterday for a distance of 12 points, making close to a 20-point drop in two consecutive days. As this issue is used in computing the table of averages in this column, the severe decline was largely instrumental in bringing about recessions in the average price of twenty-five industrial issues, and also of the fifty railroad and industrial stocks combined. The fall of 12 points yesterday represented a recession of a half point in the average price of the industrials.

Steel and More Steel.

Where is the steel to come from which the war program, the shipbuilding, and railroad plans call for in the last quarter of the year? From the present outlook, it hardly seems possible for the steel companies to produce more than 18,000,000 tons in the full six months from July 1 to Jan. 31, yet the Government's requirements alone point toward need for 23,000,000 tons. There may be overestimates somewhere, but at the best it would hardly seem that any sizable surplus for commercial projects will remain when the essential demand has been filled.

Dispatches from Washington yesterday told of plans by the locomotive plants to increase their facilities, with Government assistance as to capital. The Baldwin Works are believed to be considering the construction of a plant at Chicago, a project in mind for some time, and another, possibly, in the South. There is as yet no definite information about the plans of the other major plants. It is probable that what the locomotive works have been pressed to do in order to keep the country's railroad motive power efficient, is what many steel concerns will hurry through from now on, namely, the extension of existing manufacturing facilities.

Gold Exports to Canada.

The Royal Bank of Canada withdrew yesterday from the Sub-Treasury $168,000 of gold for shipment to its head office in Montreal.

The Delaware & Hudson Company reports for the month of July an increase of $633,639 in gross earnings and an increase of $178,214 in net earnings, as compared with figures for the corresponding month last year. For the seven months ended July 31, the company reports an increase of $1,775,041 in gross earnings and a decrease of $2,459,601 in net earnings, as compared with 1917.

Wilson Financing to Await Loan.

Dispatches from Chicago yesterday confirmed local reports current here for several weeks that the proposed new financing by Wilson & Co., the packers, would not be arranged until after the close of the Fourth Liberty Loan campaign. President Thomas E. Wilson was quoted as saying: "All negotiations are dropped because we feel that it is too late to raise funds without competing with the Government in the sale of Liberty bonds."

LEHIGH BONDS SELL QUICKLY

$15,000,000 Disposed Of in an Hour—Largely Oversubscribed.

Drexel & Co. of Philadelphia and the First National Bank of New York sold yesterday $15,000,000 of ten-year 6 per cent. collateral trust bonds of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company at 97½, to yield about 6.35 per cent. The entire issue was disposed of in about an hour and the bonds were oversubscribed three or four times. There was such a great demand for the securities that brokers traded in them on the Curb on a "when issued" basis where prices immediately jumped to 98, a half point above the subscription price, and advanced to 98⅝. Transactions on the Curb totaled $150,000 and the final ask price was 98¼.

The $15,000,000 of Lehigh Valley Railroad notes are secured by the pledge of $24,000,000 of securities, including Lehigh-Buffalo Terminal Railway Corporation first mortgage 4½s, and Lehigh Valley Railroad Company's general consolidated mortgage bonds. The bonds are dated Aug. 31, 1918, and mature Sept. 1, 1928. They are redeemable at 103 and interest at the option of the company in amounts of $500,000, or any multiple thereof, on Sept. 1, 1923, and on March 1 and Sept. 1 of any year thereafter.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has outstanding stock (par value $50) amounting to $60,608,000 upon which it has paid dividends since 1911 at the rate of 10 per cent. per annum.

Childs Company Reduces Dividend.

The Childs Company, which operates a chain of restaurants, reduced the dividend on the common stock yesterday from 1½ per cent. quarterly to one-half of 1 per cent. The company last year earned more than 20 per cent. on the junior stock issue, from which it was deduced in financial circles yesterday that the advancing cost of foodstuffs in the current year had affected earnings sufficiently to cause the dividend reduction. The usual preferred stock dividend of 1¾ per cent. was ordered, both payments being due Sept. 10 to stockholders of record Aug. 29.

GAS CO. ASKS $1.25 RATE.

Brooklyn Borough Concern Appeals to Service Board.

The Brooklyn Borough Gas Company asked the Public Service Commission yesterday to permit it to charge $1.25 per thousand cubic feet for gas and to change the standard from candle power to the British thermal unit. The application was in effect an admission by the company that the commission has the power to permit the increase, and that the price and method of charging are within its jurisdiction. A date for public hearings on the application will be set later.

By special permission of the Legislature the company formerly charged $1, which the commission reduced to 95 cents. Then the law was amended placing the company within the scope of the 80-cent law. Charles E. Hughes, as referee named by the Supreme Court, found that the low rate would be confiscatory, and thereupon the company announced that it would charge $1.25 beginning Aug. 1. Justice Benedict of the Supreme Court of Brooklyn decided that the commission had jurisdiction over the matter and enjoined the company from charging more than 95 cents without the commission's permission.

"Unless the company is allowed immediately to charge $1.25," the application declares, "it will be unable to sell stock or borrow money to install the improvements imperatively needed to enable the company to live up to the pressure and other requirements of the commission and to meet the prospective increased demands for gas during the coming Winter. For unless the work of installing the high pressure system and making the other necessary improvements is begun at once, it cannot be completed before the cold weather sets in."

NEGOTIATE FOR 10 SHIPS.

Pacific Steamship and Pacific Coast Companies Confer.

Negotiations are under way between the Pacific Coast Company and the Pacific Steamship Company for the sale of the former's ten ships to the latter concern, which has been operating them for several years. If the transaction goes through the Pacific Coast Company, which has a number of railroad properties in Oregon and Washington, will formally retire from the ocean trade. It is understood that the deal will involve about $4,000,000.

The Pacific Steamship Company is jointly controlled by the Pacific Coast Company and the Pacific Alaska Navigation Company, so that the transaction will be in the line of a readjustment of ownership. H. F. Alexander, President of the Pacific Steamship Company, is expected to come to this city soon to discuss the deal with W. W. Barnum, President of the Pacific Coast oCmpany.

Foresight

The world is turning a critical corner. Mighty things are doing. Business readjustments have already started. Far-sighted business men are safeguarding themselves now against the reaction that inevitably follows every period of abnormal prosperity. They are protecting their future profits and peace of mind with American Credit Insurance.

Not only does the American's Unlimited Policy insure against abnormal losses caused by sudden, unforeseen mishaps or conditions. It does more—it serves to prevent losses, by providing for the allowance of all covered accounts not over 45 days past due, if the company fails to collect them.

STEEL MEN DISCUSS PROBLEM OF OUTPUT

25,000,000 Tons Demanded for War and Only 17,000,000 Tons Are Now Produced.

NAME COMMITTEE TO ACT

Labor Questions to be Settled by Them, but Only War Industries Are Likely to Get Any Steel.

Maximum production of steel to meet immediate war requirements and how to get the top-notch output at the mills were considered yesterday by more than 100 of the country's steel producers at the Waldorf-Astoria. The meeting was the result of a conference in Washington last week of the trade representatives with Steel Administrator Replogle.

Judge Elbert H. Gary, Chairman of the General Committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute, presided. While no details of the meeting were given out, the impression prevailed that the steel men devoted much time to the part to be played by labor in achieving a maximum output. The labor situation, as it related to supply and wages, was understood to have been gone into in a most thorough manner. At the conclusion of the meeting Judge Gary dictated the following statement:

> The iron and steel meeting today was attended by representatives of all the principal manufacturing concerns of the industry. There was considered the question of securing the largest possible production of steel for military necessities. With other matters, were discussed various labor problems.
> After careful deliberation, the whole subject matter, by unanimous vote, was referred with power to a committee composed of the members of the present General Committee of the American Iron and Steel Institute, as follows: Elbert H. Gary, Chairman; J. A. Farrell, E. A. S. Clarke, C. M. Schwab, J. A. Topping, E. G. Grace, Willis L. King, J. A. Burden, J. A. Campbell, A. C. Dinkey, L. E. Block, H. G. Dalton, and A. F. Huston.

When Judge Gary was asked to name the specific labor problems taken up at the conference, he declined. Other steel men had nothing to add to his statement. It was understood, however, that the committee would take up both the production and labor features now pressing for solution, and make a report to a general meeting of the industry within a short time. Practically all the executives named in Judge Gary's statement were present, and in addition were Waddill Catchings, Chairman of the Sloss-Sheffield Steel and Iron Company; E. S. Thomas, President Brier Hill Steel Company; Leonard Peckitt, President Empire Steel Company, and James Bowron, President Gulf States Steel Company.

According to the announcement made in Washington, it is imperative to find means to meet in full the steel needs of the Government and the Allies. These demands for the last six months of this year already amount to more than 23,000,000 tons, and are rapidly approaching the 25,000,000 mark. Rolling mill production at the present time was said to have a capacity of 17,000,000 tons or less. The railroads will consume the largest amount of steel required by the Government; shipbuilding requirements come next, with the War Department's program third and the navy fourth. Following yesterday's meeting, only four industries may be expected to get steel for a considerable period.

STEEL DEMANDS INCREASE.

Allied Nations Place Large Additional Orders Here.

Reports from steel-making centres indicate this week that manufacturers are having impressed upon them more and more as time passes the enormous prospective consumption of material in the war. Tremendous tonnages are being sought by all the allied nations, with the demand of the United States forces in the lead. On top of these requirements is piled the call for steel necessary for the shipyards and railroads.

"With more emphasis than ever the War Industries Board has put before the steel trade in the last week the imperative call for rails, plates, and shell steel," The Iron Age says. New needs cabled from France have added to the gap between capacity and requirements, and the amount now wanted in the last four months of the year will bring the total for the second half up to 23,000,000 tons, as against an estimate of 20,000,000 tons early in July and probable production of seventeen to eighteen millions for the six months.

"Yet output does not increase, and every nerve must be strained to make up in September for the inroad made by an unusual number of hot and highly humid days in August.

"A swelling of overseas demand, due to the aggressive activities of the allied forces, has changed greatly the operating schedules of the mills. Urgent calls have been received for rails, rolling stock and shell steel and temporarily some home needs, even cars for our own roads, may have to stand aside."

NEW HIGH RECORDS IN COTTON MARKET

October Contracts Advance to 35½ Cents—Net Gains Range from 75 to 95 Points.

Despite some irregularity at the opening, the cotton market yesterday again established new high records. October contracts, which on Tuesday sold up to 35 cents, advanced to 35½ cents, the highest price for futures ever recorded in the history of the New York Cotton Exchange. The closing quotation for October was 35¼, a net gain of 80 points from the previous day's final figure. The high prices of the day were from 105 to 120 points above Tuesday's closing quotations, and the net gains of the various months ranged from 75 to 95 points.

BUTTER AND EGG MARKET.

BUTTER.—Receipts yesterday, 10,208 packages. The market holds firm on the choice and fancy grades of fresh creamery, with demand fair. Secondary qualities are moving better and show some improvement in price. Renovated firm. Ladles and packing stock steady. Creamery, higher than extras, a pound, 47½@48c; extras, 92 score, 47c; firsts, 88 to 91 score, 45@46½c; seconds, 83 to 87 score, 42½@44½c; thirds, 40@42c; unsalted, higher than extras, 49@49½c; extras, 48@48½c; firsts, 46½@47½c; seconds, 44½@46c; State dairy tubs, finest, 46@46½c; good to prime, 44@45½c; common to fair, 39@43½c; renovated extras, 42@42½c; firsts, 40½@41½c; lower grades, 38@39½c; imitation creamery, firsts, 39@40c; ladles, current make, firsts, 37½@38½c; seconds, 36@36½c; lower grades, 34½@35½c; packing stock, current make, No. 1, 36c; No. 2, 35½c; lower grades, 33@35c.

EGGS.—Exchange, 18,801 cases. Some marks of current receipts are showing more or less improvement in quality, but others are about as poor as ever, and the average is still low. The market maintains a steady to firm tone on the higher grades. Good medium qualities showing slight loss are meeting a fair demand. More seriously defective goods showing more or less heavy loss are still pressing for sale at any reasonable offers, and the full range of prices shows no material change. Storage eggs continue in good demand and firm. Nearby white eggs of very fancy quality still have some sales up to 68c., but that price is extreme and buyers very critical. It takes only slight defects to reduce values considerably and ordinary lots are dragging heavily at easy prices. REVENUE BILL TO GO TO HOUSE ON MONDAY

Committee Considers Treasury Recommendations for Administrative Features.

DEFECT IN EXEMPTION PLAN

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, August 28.—Indications now are that the $8,000,000,000 revenue bill will not be reported to the House until Monday next. This is contrary to the expectation of the Ways and Means Committee, which had hoped to have the bill ready Friday or Saturday. But Claude Kitchin, Chairman of the committee, said this afternoon that it had been impossible to finish the work by the time expected.

The committee spent practically all of its time today inspecting new suggestions as to the administrative part of the measure. Not long ago the Treasury Department sent down some twenty-five suggestions, and then it followed these with fifty or sixty more. The committee went over ten or fifteen today. Chairman Kitchin said that nothing final had been done about the differential on earned and unearned incomes.

The committee is still struggling with the controversy over graduated income surtaxes. The original position of the committee was strongly disposed toward the taxation of Liberty Bonds and the bonds of States, municipalities and local civil corporations. Secretary McAdoo, who urged that such a course would hamper the sale of Liberty Bonds and draw upon the Government the charge of deliberately getting behind a gross violation of the Constitution as a war necessity. He advanced the plan to establish in the revenue bill a distinct and unmistakable exemption of all Government securities and also securities of States, cities, and other civil divisions throughout the country.

To provide against the loss of revenue involved in such an exemption, Mr. McAdoo asked that income from exempt securities be taken account of only for the computing of income surtaxes and for the placing of the taxpayer in the proper classification, or bracket, where he would stand if his income consisted entirely of returns from taxable securities.

The committee has received a deluge of protests from every part of the country against the proposition to tax exempted bonds, and, growing out of reports that have gone out in regard to Secretary McAdoo's recommendations, evidently many think he wants Liberty bonds taxed. The committee has also had many telegrams and letters from security holders in various parts of the country to the effect that they understand that the Secretary wants all Liberty bonds hereafter issued to be free from all taxes. To meet this charge Secretary McAdoo today issued the following denial:

Secretary McAdoo made himself quite clear in his hearing before the Ways and Means Committee on the whole matter of taxation of incomes. He called attention to the contention from the Treasury Department that the present practice of placing the taxpayer's deduction of nontaxable income all in one bracket of classification, and that the highest was wrong and that nontaxable income should be distributed over all the brackets. By following this plan the taxpayer would be required to state in his returns his income of every description, whether exempt or otherwise, and his tax would be computed on the basis that all of it was taxable in the various brackets and then from this computed tax there would be deducted whatever credit should be allowed for the part of his income which was plainly exempt as Government, State or municipal bonds.

Injustice in Exemptions.

Thus, the man whose income was $500,000, of which $100,000 was produced from State bonds or other similar exempt securities, would have his tax computed in the class that was inclusive of incomes of $500,000 and would pay the rate pertaining to that bracket, but just below the statement of his tax would appear a deduction of one-fifth of the amount of the tax by reason of the fact that one-fifth of his income was derived from nontaxable bonds.

In other words, the view is taken by Mr. McAdoo that it is not just to the great body of taxpayers or to the Government to allow four-fifths of the income to pay a lower rate of taxation because one-fifth is exempt.

It was asserted today that the loss to the Government under the present practice of administration of the revenue law runs into millions. The Treasury view is that there is an excess of privileges in allowing exempt income to depress the rate of taxation on the nonexempt part of the income. Careful examination of this proposition has been made by the Government legal authorities, many experts have been consulted, and Secretary McAdoo has been advised that the plan is constitutional and that it does not in any sense put a tax on exempt bonds.

PRAISES LABOR IN WAR.

President Alfred E. Smith of the Board of Aldermen, Democratic candidate for the Gubernatorial nomination, in a statement to the union printers yesterday on the significance of Labor Day this year praised labor men for standing behind the President in his war program.

"The patriotic devotion and loyalty with which labor has at all times responded to the call of the President are matters of record," he said. "A great industrial army is as essential to the winning of the war as a powerful military force. While we glory in the triumphs of our heroic troops abroad, we also point with pride to the splendid achievements and great sacrifices of our industrial army at home. The men and women of labor are in every way doing their share toward winning the conflict in which we are engaged."

FINANCIAL NOTES.

J. P. Morgan & Co. announce that they have prepared schedules for use in connection with United Kingdom of Great Britain and Ireland two-year 5 per cent. notes maturing Sept. 1, which may be had on application at their offices. They also request that holders of the notes deposit them as early as possible, accompanied by schedule, in order to facilitate the handling of the business.

The Guaranty Trust Company of New York, Trustee of the Bethlehem Steel Company 5 per cent. notes, due Feb. 15, 1919, is prepared to pay at its Trust Department these notes at par and interest to date of presentation and surrender by holders, with proper income tax certificates.

The New Stock Exchange admitted to listing yesterday the following: American Telephone and Telegraph Company's $48,367,200 of seven-year 6 per cent. convertible bonds, Pierce Oil Corporation's $18,370,176 par value common stock, $9,406,000 ten-year 6 per cent. debentures, and $1,975,000 five-year 6 per cent. notes, and Pacific Mail Steamship Company's $350,000 additional common stock.

Jay Edson Eddy, formerly with the Equitable Trust Company, has been admitted to partnership in the Stock Exchange firm of Holmes, Bulkley & Wardrop.

The annual stockholders' meeting of the Philadelphia Rapid Transit Company, regularly called for Sept. 18, has been postponed until Oct. 16, and the completion of the full annual report for the year ended June 30, 1918, will be deferred until after the date set by the Public Service Commission for their consideration of the city contract.

BANKERS' TRUST COMPANY, NEW YORK, TRUSTEE

Redeemable at 103 and interest, at the option of the Company in amounts of $500,000, or any multiple thereof, on September 1, 1923, and on March 1 and September 1 of any year thereafter, on thirty days' notice, as set forth in the Collateral Trust Agreement securing the issue.

The Company will assume the payment of the Pennsylvania State Tax, and also agrees to pay any Federal income tax which it may lawfully pay, to an amount not exceeding two per cent. (2%).

This issue in addition to being a direct obligation of the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company, will be secured by a pledge with the Trustee under a collateral trust agreement, of the following collateral:

$4,000,000 Lehigh-Buffalo Terminal Railway Corporation First Mortgage 4½% Bonds, due November 1st, 1966 (guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company).

$2,600,000 Consolidated Real Estate Company Mortgage 4% Bonds, due February 1st, 1956 (guaranteed as to principal and interest by the Lehigh Valley Railroad Company).

$17,400,000 Lehigh Valley Railroad Company General Consolidated Mortgage Gold Bonds, due May 1st, 2003; $12,000,000 of said bonds bearing interest at the rate of 5%; $1,000,000 bearing interest at 4½%; $4,400,000 bearing interest at 4%.

The Trust Agreement will provide that the Company may withdraw the bonds originally pledged and substitute others therefor under conditions properly protective of the bonds of this issue.

The Lehigh Valley Railroad Company has outstanding stock (par value $50) amounting to $60,608,000 upon which it has paid dividends since 1911 at the rate of 10% per annum.

The United States Railroad Administration has informed the Company that the Director-General will interpose no objection to the issue and sale of these bonds.

Subscriptions for the above bonds if when and as issued will be received by the undersigned, who reserve the right to allot the bonds and to close the books without notice.

The undersigned will be prepared to receive payment for subscriptions to the bonds on September 3d and will issue therefor their temporary certificates in bearer form pending the preparation of the definitive bonds.

CONSOLIDATED EXCHANGE

Securities were steady at the close of the market yesterday on the Consolidated Stock Exchange. Final quotations showed net gains in the industrials, while the railroad issues were slightly lower and inclined to sluggishness. Realization sales in the last hour caused a sharp reaction, and the market tone became irregular.

War Training for Women
A Call to Service—Trained Woman Secretaries are needed to speed Government Work

One of the Government's great needs is for trained secretaries and statistical workers. To help supply them, Drexel Institute, in co-operation with the U. S. Civil Service Commission, has prepared special training courses.

Graduates of these courses will be eligible for certification to positions under Civil Service. The certificate of graduation will be the basis for rating; no further scholastic test will be required.

1. A four months' intensive course for High School graduates who are qualified in Stenography and Typewriting and have had one year's experience in business.
2. A one year's intensive course for college graduates. Specific technical and statistical secretarial training of high grade.
3. A two years' course for High School Graduates.

Drexel Institute's special war training courses for women have been approved by the United States Civil Service Commission.

Students who enter these courses will be at once in training for their country's service.

Uniform will be worn. Military regulations.

Enrollment will be limited and applicants carefully selected. As courses begin October 7, we urge you to write at once for complete Bulletin and enrollment blanks.

The nation needs you.

BRAINS must back ARMS

MILLIONS of men have donned uniforms in answer to the call to arms. In all justice to them, we who are under military age or exempt for other reasons, must prepare now for true patriotic service here to lessen their burden over there.

Clark College, with its war-time courses, offers to young men of limited time and means, with a high-school education or its equivalent, unusual opportunities to prepare themselves for a commission in any branch of the U. S. service.

This work can be supplemented by work from the regular college courses and a special war-time certificate is awarded for the satisfactory completion of two years' work. Open to men up to thirty years of age.

The college is generously endowed, thus permitting the low tuition fee of $50.00 with the best sort of faculty and equipment. For further information, address

SCHWAB SPEEDS LAUNCHING

Charles M. Schwab, Director General of Shipbuilding, after a conference yesterday at the shipyards of the Submarine Boat Corporation at Port Newark, N. J., told the men in the yard he was greatly pleased to hear they would soon start turning out three ships a week instead of two, their present maximum. This week's quota will slide into Newark Bay on Saturday afternoon, it was said. Prior to the conference it was not known whether the launchings would take place weekly or in groups of six or seven.

The Submarine Boat officials left the question to Mr. Schwab and to Charles L. Piez, Vice Chairman of the Shipping Board, who accompanied him. If Mr. Schwab had decided on a "big splash" instead of the weekly little splashes, the shipbuilding company was ready to drop seven ships into the water on Labor Day.

Mr. Schwab, after deciding on the two-a-week policy, called the foremen and department heads together for a brief interview. Peeling off his coat and rolling up his sleeves, the steelmaster gave them a heart-to-heart talk on keeping up the pace.

"My faith in this yard has been justified," he said. "I predicted it would be the pacemaker for all the yards on the Atlantic Coast, and it's verifying that prediction."

"I want that pledge to mean," said Mr. Schwab, "that when I come back here in four weeks there will be eight ships in the water that aren't there now. And on the day that you send me word that you are ready to launch three a week instead of two I'll come here and bring not only Mr. Piez with me but the whole Emergency Fleet Corporation."

Chairman Piez in addressing the men said that between now and the first of the year, no matter what sacrifices they might have to make, the United States must supply 1,800,000 tons of new ships.

The Foundation Shipbuilding Company at Kearny, N. J., will launch today two wooden cargo-carrying ships, bringing the total number launched at its yards up to seven. The ships to take the water today are the Bologan and the Bugaya. Each is of 3,500 tons dead weight.

$6,500,000 W. S. S. Sold.

Close to $6,500,000 of War Savings Stamps had been sol dup to yesterday by the salesmen who are engaged in the campaign to dispose of $25,000,000 worth by Friday night. More than $1,500,000 worth were sold yesterday alone. Among the salesmen were 200 Postal Telegraph messengers, each of whom went out yesterday morning with plenty of stamps for sale.

REAL ESTATE FIELD

Columbus Circle Holdings in Long-Term Lease—Dyckman Investment Purchase.

Confidence in the future of real estate in the Columbus Circle section was reflected yesterday in a long-term lease which was closed three years before possession can be taken. Walter J. Salmon leased from Mrs. Nellie Flake, for a period of twenty-one years from October, 1921, the Pabst Grand Circle Building at the northwest corner of Eighth Avenue and Fifty-eighth Street, a four-story building on a plot 100 by 40.8 by 115.4 by 100, and also 8 and 9 Columbus Circle, a two-story building with a frontage of 82.8 feet, separated from the corner property by the narrow lot covered by the entrance to the Park Theatre. S. Osgood Pell & Co. negotiated the deal.

Investor Buys Dyckman Apartment.

In the Dyckman section A. Joachim purchased for investment from the Charles Hensle Construction Company 318 to 322 Haven Avenue, a five-story new law tenement on a plot 75 by 114. The property has an annual rent roll of $16,000 and was held at $120,000.

Houston Street Loft Buyer.

The United States Trust Company sold to a client of L. Tanenbaum, Strauss & Co., the six-story loft building, at 25 to 27 West Houston Street, on a plot 50 by 100.

Bronx Apartment Sale.

The Ulster Court Corporation, Joseph G. Abramson, President, has purchased from the Adavine Construction Company the new five-story apartment house at the southwest corner of Weeks Avenue and 173d Street, on a plot 85 by 95, held at $100,000. In part payment was given the five-story dwelling at 7 West 120th Street. Heller & Sussman were the brokers.

Brooklyn.

The Realty Trust sold for the Alco Building Company the one-family semi-detached brick dwelling with garage, at 6,013 Twentieth Avenue, Mapleton Park, to Henrietta Wolf of Manhattan.

Queens Borough Sale.

Theatricals for Army Officers.

The Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company has leased for Mrs. Anna Van Nest Gambrill the building at 150 East Thirty-sixth Street to the Amateur Comedy Club. The property will be extensively altered and used to give free theatrical performances to officers of the United States Army and Navy.

Mrs. Oelrichs Takes Apartment.

Mrs. Hermann Oelrichs, whose residence at the northeast corner of Fifth Avenue and Fifty-seventh Street will be occupied as a branch banking office of the New York Trust Company, has leased at 270 Park Avenue an apartment of sixteen rooms and five baths. Douglas L. Elliman & Co. were the brokers.

Long Island City Lease.

The Douglas Robinson, Charles S. Brown Company has leased the plot owned by the Wotherspoon Plaster Mills, Inc., at Vernon and Washington Avenues and the East River, Long Island City, to James T. Dinsmore. The property consists of 115,000 square feet, with a large factory and several smaller buildings.

Recent Buyers.

Metcalf Brothers & Co. are the buyers of the twelve-story loft building 45 to 47 East Twentieth Street. The property was purchased for investment from Ira A. Kip, Jr.

Realty Notes.

As a site for a garage P. Franz & Co., truckmen, have completed a lease for the remainder of the old car barn property at 704 to 716 East Eleventh Street.

The Young Women's Christian Association has increased its holdings on East Fifty-second Street by the purchase of 129 and 131, two three-story dwellings on a plot 31.6 by 100.5. The property was sold by Minturn Post Collins, subject to a mortgage of $40,000.

THE WEATHER.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—A cyclonic depression has moved into the upper Lake region, and pressure continues high over the Canadian Maritime Provinces and along the Atlantic Coast. General rains have overspread the Ohio Valley, the western portion of the Lake region, the South Atlantic States, and Alabama.

It is warmer in the Ohio Valley and cooler in the upper Missouri Valley.

Showery weather is indicated for Thursday in Southern New England and Atlantic Coast districts, southward, including Florida; also in the lower Lake region. It will be somewhat warmer Thursday in Atlantic Coast districts north of the Carolinas and slightly cooler in the lower Ohio Valley. Moderate temperatures are probable in the lower Lake region.

Winds for Thursday and Friday along the North and Middle Atlantic Coasts will be fresh southeast, with showers; South Atlantic Coast, gentle south, thunder showers.

FORECASTS: TODAY AND FRIDAY.

Southern New England — Showers late Thursday and Friday.

Northern New England—Fair Thursday, except for showers in Vermont and New Hampshire; Friday, fair.

The temperature record for the twenty-four hours ended at 11 P. M., taken from the thermometer at the local office of the United States Weather Bureau, is as follows:

Education Notes.

A special meeting of the Board of Education will be held tomorrow afternoon at 4 o'clock for the consideration of the budget and other matters.

The new Bronx school building for the Evander Childs High School, 184th Street and Creston Avenue, will be ready for registration Sept. 4. The new building has forty-nine schoolrooms and can accommodate about 2,000 children.

During the evening community centre season which ended last June each of the centres sold War Savings Stamps and Liberty bonds. Eugene C. Gibney, Assistant Director, has offered over $115 in prizes to the schools showing the best results in the sale of War Savings Stamps. The schools which sold the greatest number of stamps will receive banners indicating that they have done the best work in their respective boroughs.

An information bureau was opened yesterday on the ground floor of the Board of Education Building, Park Avenue and Fifty-ninth Street, in order better to accommodate the hundreds of people inquiring each day for information pertaining to schools.

The Civil Service.

United States.

The commission announces an examination for gas inspector, for men only. Vacancies exist in the Indian Office, Osage, Okla., at $1,500 to $1,800 a year, and in positions requiring similar qualifications. The duties of this position will be to inspect meters, check meter readings and constants used in measuring the volume of gas. Competitors will not be required to report for examination at any place, but will be rated on education, experience, and report, (to be submitted with application.) Applicants must have graduated from a standard four years' high school course or have completed a course of study equivalent to that required for such graduation, and have had at least one year of experience in metering and measuring gas, including the checking of meters and measuring the open flow capacity and rock pressure of wells. Applicants must be between 20 and 45 years of age.

DRAFT BILL MAY GO TO WILSON TODAY

SCHOOL CLAUSE ADOPTED

Measure Expected to Go to House and Senate at Noon and Be Passed at Once.

Special to The New York Times.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Almost complete agreement on the differences between the Senate and the House on the Man Power bill was reached in four hours this afternoon by the conferees. Only a few details remain to be arranged. The conferees say the bill will be reported to both Houses tomorrow at noon, and expect the Senate and the House will stand back of the agreement. It is now the plan to send the bill to the President by tomorrow night for his signature.

What loomed up as the chief subject of controversy in debate—the "work-or-fight" amendment—was knocked out of the bill. The House conferees, Representatives Dent, Kahn, and Fields, refused to accept this amendment which sought to force labor exempted from military duty to remain at other war work, and not strike, on penalty of being drafted. The House members insisted that this point was sufficiently covered in the law, which states that no exemption shall continue when the reason for it no longer exists.

"The Senate conferees agreed not to insist upon the amendment," said Senator Chamberlain. "We want to get the bill through. The drafting of men from 18 to 45, is, after all, the essential part of the bill."

What is known as the McCulloch amendment, passed by the House, and which would draft citizens of cobelligerents, who were not subject to the present "allied slacker" treaties, was also taken out of the bill by the conferees. The Senate conferees, Senators Chamberlain, Hitchcock, and Warren, opposed it, and the House members yielded.

To Drop Penrose Proposal.

One amendment yet to be disposed of is that of Senator Penrose, which seeks to throw upon the local draft boards the responsibility for determining solely from a registrant's questionnaire whether or not he is exempt. It is probable this also will be thrown out. General Crowder, the Provost Marshal General, has already sent out to local boards the prepared questionnaire, and it is said that if the Penrose amendment were adopted it would necessitate changes and delay. General Crowder will appear before the conferees tomorrow and explain why he does not think the amendment suitable at this time.

The conferees also struck out the provision which allowed men from one part of a State to sit upon a draft board in another part of the same Commonwealth. There had been objection to this in the Senate, which passed it, and the conferees decided that as the draft boards worked very well under the former plan it might be well to continue it.

In the Senate an amendment had been inserted allowing officers to obtain uniforms and equipment at cost from Quartermaster's stores. The conferees agreed that this was designed to prevent the high prices usually charged for outfits. However, a modification was adopted, this being that the officers might obtain the uniforms and equipments under restrictions of the Secretary of War. This was done, it was said, to prevent officers from misusing the provision. The amendment includes cadets at the Military Academy.

House School Clause Stays.

When it came to the question of education of soldiers, the House amendment was adopted. This authorizes the Secretary of War to assign soldiers to special and technical institutions and to pay for their training. In other words, the Secretary may send soldiers to school at once, whereas the Senate amendment which was shelved did not allow training until after the war. As the amendment stands, the 18 to 21 year old men may be sent to the schools if it is desired.

An amendment by Senator Frances of Maryland granting to men honorably exempted from the draft some distinguishing button has not yet been acted upon, but will likely be accepted by the House conferees. Representative Treadway's amendment in the House bill, reclassifying registrants, was rejected. Senator Falls's amendment allowing soldiers under 21 homestead privileges was retained.

GOV. GOODRICH HURT, MAY NOT SURVIVE

INDIANAPOLIS, Ind., Aug. 28.—Governor James P. Goodrich of Indiana was seriously and perhaps fatally injured in an accident tonight when his automobile collided with a street car.

BACK PAY FOR LIBERTY LOAN

McAdoo's Advice to Railroad Workers—Women to Help Loan.

WASHINGTON, Aug. 28.—Railroad employes were asked today by Director General McAdoo to invest the back pay which they get as a result of the recent wage increase in bonds of the Fourth Liberty Loan, the campaign for which will open a month from today.

"No employe can make better use of his back pay," said the Director General in a circular to be distributed together with pay envelopes, "than to lend it to the Government at interest, thus securing an investment of absolute safety for himself and building up a reserve for a rainy day.

"I want the railroad men of the United States to do more, if possible, than anybody else, because I want them to be among the first always in patriotism, in service, and in sacrifice to our great and glorious country. We have the Kaiser groggy—let us keep hitting hard now until he is counted out."

Women Liberty Loan workers in cities and country communities throughout the nation were notified in a letter sent out today by the National Woman's Liberty Loan Committee to start organization by Sept. 5 for the campaign. Reports to headquarters indicate that more women than ever before have volunteered for active work for the fourth loan, stimulated by the growing desire of women to participate in the war. Hundreds of booths will be maintained by women at county and State agriculture fairs this Fall for soliciting bond subscriptions.

Another $500,000,000 block of certificates of indebtedness in preparation for the loan was announced yesterday by the Treasury. These certificates, the fifth bi-weekly issue since June 25, will be dated Sept. 3, payable Jan. 2, and will carry 4½ per cent. interest like similar certificates in the past. Subscriptions will be received up to Sept. 10.

Tax certificates payable next July, announced more than a week ago, will be sold simultaneously with all issues of loan certificates.

Secretary McAdoo now plans to postpone determination of the size of the new loan until the form of revenue legislation is more clearly outlined by Congress, which indicates that it may be two weeks before the loan announcement is made.

FEARS PEACE DRIVE BY GERMANY HERE

'A WHISPERING PROPAGANDA'

Correspondent Tells Press Club That Our Soldiers Abroad Are Firm for Dictated Peace.

Floyd Gibbons, war correspondent for The Chicago Tribune, who was wounded when he went over the top with the marines at Château-Thierry, at a reception given to him last night by the New York Press Club predicted that the coming Winter would witness the greatest German peace offensive thus far launched.

"The next German peace offensive will be put out in most attractive form," he said. "It will be plausible and insidious. The offensive will not be launched through diplomatic channels. The Germans will try to create a sentiment in this country for peace. They will start afresh the whispering propaganda which is still going on to some extent.

"People will be led to believe that Germany will be ready to give up the occupied portions of France, Belgium, and renounce claim to Alsace-Lorraine. Now that the tide is turned, the Germans, in the next peace offensive, will aim to have the people in the allied nations say that the time has come, when after four years of warfare and the shedding of much blood, it would be better to talk things over. That is the thing we must steel ourselves against. We must beware of our American Lansdownes. The peace talkers will possibly be able to muster up some well-known men, but that ought to make no difference as far as the real feelings of the people are concerned.

"The men out there are not afraid of what is to come. They know that the supply of comrades in arms and of equipments will continue, but what they are afraid of is that the people back home may be persuaded to believe the insidious whispering peace propaganda that is to be launched this Winter, and even before the Winter sets in.

"If the people of this country to any extent are apparently convinced that there is anything in the German peace offensive the men in the American Expeditionary Forces will be greatly disappointed. It will be a blow to them as bad in effect on their morale as the loss of a battle. The army knows that Germany is beaten now. Make no mistake about that. The ginger and initiative of the American soldier has astonished the world. But it did not surprise America. We always knew what the American soldier was and what he would do when he had a chance to demonstrate his abilities. The men in the allied armies know today that they are entitled to a peace by dictation and they will not be satisfied by less.

"There is but one thing to do with such a propaganda. Kill it when it starts. Spread the story about among the population of the insincerity of Germany's peace offensive before it starts. Get the people ready to expect it so that they may know when it arrives on schedule time that it is nothing more than insidious, false, pernicious, and dangerous propaganda, dangerous to the morale at home and to the morale of the men on the firing line."

MISS RANKIN LOSING.

HELENA, Mont., Aug. 28.—Scattering returns from thirty-six out of fifty-three counties showed Dr. O. M. Landstrum maintaining his lead over Jeannette Rankin for the Republican nomination for United States Senator. The vote stood to-night: Landstrum, 10,004; Rankin, 6,582.

DETROIT, Mich., Aug. 28.—The triumph of Newman H. Newberry over Henry Ford in the Republican primaries finds the Michigan Republicans prepared for the battle at the November polls. Expectations are that the fight will be similar to the Senatorship struggle in Wisconsin last Winter. Both National Committees are expected to direct the campaigning and the State will be invaded by national celebrities of both parties.

Delay Important Calls

"CURIOSITY CALLS" are calls that are made as the result of idle curiosity regarding any unexpected happening, such as the ringing of bells, blowing of whistles, or loud reports denoting an explosion or other unusual occurrence.

SUCH CALLS may seriously delay important calls dealing with the emergency itself.

WAR WORK MESSAGES that ought to have clear passage over the lines at all times are delayed, and the congestion of trunk line facilities prevents giving good telephone service.

You'll never need to ask "What is the price?" when the shoe salesman is showing you W.L.Douglas shoes because the actual value is determined and the retail price fixed at the factory before W. L. Douglas name and the retail price is stamped on the bottom. The stamped price is W. L. Douglas personal guarantee that the shoes are always worth the price paid for them.

Stamping the price on every pair of shoes as a protection against high prices and unreasonable profits is only one example of the constant endeavor of W. L. Douglas to protect his customers. W. L. Douglas name on shoes is his pledge that they are the best in materials, workmanship and style possible to produce at the price. Into every pair go the results of sixty-six years experience in making shoes, dating back to the time when W. L. Douglas was a lad of seven, pegging shoes.

The quality of W.L.Douglas product is guaranteed by more than 40 years experience in making fine shoes. The smart styles are the leaders in the fashion centres of America. They are made in a well-equipped factory at Brockton, Mass., by the highest paid, skilled shoemakers, under the direction and supervision of experienced men, all working with an honest determination to make the best shoes for the price that money can buy. The retail prices are the same everywhere. They cost no more in San Francisco than they do in New York.

CAUTION—Before you buy be sure W. L. Douglas name and the retail price is stamped on the bottom and the inside top facing. If the stamped price has been mutilated, BEWARE OF FRAUD.

For sale by 105 W.L.Douglas stores and over 9,000 W.L. Douglas dealers, or can be ordered direct from W. L. Douglas by mail. Send for booklet telling how to order shoes through the mail, postage free.

What The Packers Do For You

Not very many years ago in the history of the world, the man that lived in America had to hunt for his food, or go without.

Now he sits down at a table and decides what he wants to eat; or his wife calls up the market and has it sent home for him. And what he gets is incomparably better.

Everyone of us has some part in the vast human machine, called society, that makes all this convenience possible.

The packer's part is to prepare meat and get it to every part of the country sweet and fresh—to obtain it from the stock raiser, to dress it, cool it, ship it many miles in special refrigerator cars, keep it cool at distributing points, and get it into the consumer's hands—your hands—through retailers, all within about two weeks.

For this service—so perfect and effective that you are scarcely aware that anything is being done for you—you pay the packers an average profit of only a fraction of a cent a pound above actual cost on every pound of meat you eat.
